Senators Call Profit Sharing Vital To Capitalism

Special Committee Holds Government Attitude Delays Business Recovery

Holding that sharing of profits with employes is "essential to the ultimate maintenance of the capitalistic system," a special Senate committee last night submitted a report to which was attached a denunciation of the Government's attitude toward business.

"Until government adopts a more co-operative attitude toward business," the committee said, "we can expect to see an indefinite period of business uncertainty, continued unemployment, and semidepression conditions."

The group, under chairmanship of Senator Herring (Democrat), of Iowa, presented a 351-page report on a ten-month study of profit-sharing in American industry, ordered by the Senate. The study was made under a resolution by Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, who served on the committee. Sen. Johnson (Democrat), of Colorado, the third member, announced several days ago he would not sign the report since he was not in agreement with all of its conclusions.

Further Study Necessary

The committee submitted with its own statement the report of its staff, whose observations it commended "to the consideration of American public opinion." The criticisms of Government attitude toward business were in the latter portion.

On the subject of "incentive taxation," which was discussed at length during hearings, the committee held that further exploration was necessary. Under this proposal, industries would be offered certain tax exemptions to induce them to adopt profit-sharing.

"We do not believe it is practical to apply 'incentive taxation' to the profit-sharing motive—at least not until the theory and principle of 'incentive taxation' has been more deeply explored and perhaps subjected to preliminary experiment," the report said. The committee agreed, however, that "prudent experiments" could be usefully undertaken.

Makes Two Suggestions

"Tax rewards will not prove a panacea," the report added, "but it together with the concurrent refining of much of our Federal legislation, tax and otherwise, should prove an immeasurable aid to the regenerating of confidence in the minds of capital."

The committee made no recommendations for legislation to compel adoption of profit sharing, but in the survey report were two suggestions:

That payments to employes from accumulated profit-sharing retirement funds be exempt from all income taxes.

That the Federal Government issue special "profit-sharing fund" bonds, available only for profit-sharing funds and to be used for protection of profit-sharing fund investments. The committee contended that instability of security values and low interest rates in recent years had made it difficult to invest such funds safely.

Social-Minded Business

The report declared that no employer could hope to hand over a portion of his profits to his workers as an alternative to unionism, and added:

"In the midst of a tendency generally to condemn private business as selfish and reactionary and un-

10 Killed, 60 Hurt In Minnesota Tornado

100 Buildings Razed Near Town of Anoka; Doctors and Nurses Mobilized for Rescue Work; Troops Take Command

By the Associated Press.

Minneapolis, June 18.—A tornado roared across a 25-mile long area west and north of here today, killing 11 persons, injuring more than 60 and destroying upwards of 100 farm homes and other buildings.

The known dead were Mrs. Anna Freeman, 76; Ellen Freeman, Mr. and Mrs. Bradley, H. G. Groat, 95; Leo Kid, 25, E. Cgrin, Fred Zimmerman, 75; Edward Marrissette and Walter Israel, 28.

Seven towns, Corcoran, Maple Grove, Champlin, Anoka, Cedar, St. Francis and Bethel, lay in the path of the tornado, which rushed out of the Southwest, but principal damage occurred at Anoka, a town of 5,000, where the wind cut a swath two blocks wide.

Between 40 and 50 houses were destroyed at Anoka as well as a church, armory, large store and garage. At Cedar, a church, creamery, schoolhouse and three homes were flattened.

Damage in the other towns was less. In the countryside, uncounted farm homes, barns and other buildings were demolished.

The National Guard took command and nurses and doctors from the Twin Cities worked by candlelight to minister to the injured.

The City Hospital at Anoka treated 44 persons for broken arms and legs and less serious injuries. Twelve were brought to Minneapolis and seven to St. Paul.

Officials in the Twin Cities organized doctors, nurses, police and sheriff officers into rescue squads. Adjt. Gen. Ellard Walsh and Gov. Harold Stassen went to the disaster area.

Speeding home after an outing, Mrs. Freeman, her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Bradley, and another daughter, Ellen Freeman, ran head-on into the tornado, which whipped their machine through the air for several hundred yards, killing them all.

Groat's house was flattened in an instant and he and Cyrin died beneath it. Fishing on a river bank near his house, Zimmerman was whirled 175 yards through the air to his death.

Six truckloads of National Guardsmen were sent to Anoka. An American Legion convention meeting at Anoka adjourned and organized squads, searching for dead and injured and patrolling streets.

All traffic into the area was blocked off. Frantic hundreds were turned back while trying to drive into the region to learn the fate of friends and relatives.

All telephone lines were down. A heavy rain followed the tornado, complicating rescue work.

Fire Kills Actor and Aged Couple

Hands of Pair, 80, Clasped in Death; Friend of Al Smith Perishes; 25 Hurt

By the Associated Press.

Providence, R. I., June 18.—Trapped in their fourth floor apartments, a former vaudeville star plunged to his death and an 80-year-old couple died in flames today as fire swept a large apartment building in the Edgewood section. Twenty-five persons were injured.

Burns and injuries suffered in a leap for life proved fatal to Eddie Healey, 44, restaurateur who once played the piano and sang in the stage team of Healey and Cross. Healey, his clothing aflame, jumped from the window of his apartment just as firemen arrived.

Their hands clasped, the charred bodies of Mr. and Mrs. William A. Booth were found in the debris hours after the fire broke out.

Five Taken to Hospital

Five seriously injured persons were taken to a hospital while the others were treated nearby.

An agent of the owner estimated the loss at between $150,000 and $200,000. The building, constructed at a cost of $300,000, contained 54 apartments, all but two occupied. Little was left except the charred brick walls.

Police at first said two other persons were burned to death, but a recheck later put the total fatalities at three. A dozen persons, at first unaccounted for, were found to be safe. Cause of the fire was not determined.

Fire Fills Corridors

Most of the injured were hurt leaping from flame-filled apartments on the third and fourth floors. Fire filled corridors and stair wells, and prevented escape by stairways.

Healey, a close friend of former Gov. Alfred E. Smith of New York, began his singing career as a choir boy here. After a musical education arranged for by his choirmaster, Healey was booked as a single act. Later he teamed with Jack Ryan for two years before joining Allan Cross, of Chicago.

The team of Cross and Healey was a hit on the two-a-day boards for more than 14 years.

When they played in Albany, during Smith's term, Healey always was a guest at the executive mansion.

Tax, Money Bills Due for Action Today

But 12 Days Remain For Enactment by End of Fiscal Year; Relief Next Item

By the Associated Press.

With only 12 days remaining of the Federal fiscal year, Congressional leaders have mapped an ambitious schedule of legislative action this week on major measures which must be disposed of before the year's end June 30.

Foremost in this category are the tax revision bill and a measure continuing the President's monetary powers which are to come up in the House and Senate respectively today.

Included in the tax bill are continuations of present excise levies—the so-called "nuisance taxes"—now due to expire with the end of this month. If the new fiscal year arrives with these taxes not reenacted, the Government will lose several million dollars for each day they remain off the statute books.

House to Act Today

House leaders were optimistic that the tax bill could be passed in one day and sent to the Senate.

The administration-sponsored legislation to continue the $2,000,000,000 stablization fund and the President's power to devalue the dollar appeared likely, however, to run into powerful opposition in the Senate.

Senator Pittman (Democrat), Nevada, said 16 Senators from western States had given him authority to speak for them in opposing the legislation unless the Treasury agrees to keep the price for newly mined domestic silver at not less than the present 64.64 cents an ounce.

Silver Bloc Active

Pittman recently urged the Treasury to make known its price fixing intentions prior to June 30, when the present domestic silver price proclamation expires. Secretary Morgenthau replied he had no intention of disclosing the Treasury's decision until that date.

Another wing of the silver bloc, led by Senators Thomas (Democrat), Oklahoma, and McCarran (Democrat), Nevada, already has proposed a series of amendments to the legislation. One by Thomas would take $1,500,000,000 out of the stabilization fund, as well as $500,000,000 of the Treasury's "free gold," to back an additional $2,000,000,000

Britain Told Blockade Amounts to Actual War

Retired Admiral Fears Sudden Axis Stroke; London May Recall Envoy

Hunger Over Tientsin

1,500 BRITISH SUBJECTS were virtual prisoners in the Tientsin concession, with only a 48-hour food supply as Japanese tightened the blockade.—Page 3.

LOSS OF TRADE with Britain and the United States is the most critical threat facing Japan in the Tientsin dispute, the Foreign Policy Association says.—Page 3.

Navy Viewpoint

By the United Press.

London, June 18.—Retired Admiral Sir Roger Keyes, one of Great Britain's foremost naval authorities, tonight warned that Japan's Tientsin blockade "amounts to a declaration of war" and is being supported by Germany and Italy.

The warning of Keyes, former deputy chief of the navy staff and lord commissioner of the Admiralty, was made before 3,000 Air Raid Precautions volunteers as the cabinet's foreign affairs committee prepared to meet tomorrow and consider the advisability of ordering reprisals against Japan.

Keyes' speech revealed the anxiety of British government and defense leaders over the possibility Germany and Italy might be tempted by Britain's troubles in China to precipitate a European crisis in hope of catching the British off guard.

Fear Surprise Axis Move

"The next act of the aggression dictators may come as a great surprise—as a bolt from the blue—and it is most necessary that the whole country should be organized, ready and prepared to meet it," the retired admiral said.

"The events in Tientsin, with the support given the Japanese by Germany and Italy, really amount to a declaration of war against the British Empire, and it is a challenge which must be met.

"I am convinced that if we are resolute and firm and show the whole world that Britain is ready to enter the struggle and make full use of her wealth, industry and manpower we could win this war without a clash of arms.

"If we hestitate, humiliation will be certain to follow and war will be almost inevitable."

This utterance was followed tonight by an announcement that Prime Minister Chamberlain will deliver a statement on the Anglo-Japanese crisis in the House of Commons tomorrow afternoon after he meets with the foreign affairs committee of the cabinet.

London May Recall Envoy

Possibility of a diplomatic rupture was seen, and it was possible Chamberlain tomorrow may announce the recall of Ambassador Sir Robert Leslie Craigie from Tokyo.

Chamberlain is expected to warn Japan that Britain is fully prepared to meet any challenge in the Far East, despite the fact that negotiations with Soviet Russia for a European defensive alliance have not yet reached a successful conclusion.

Officials of the foreign office, the board of trade and the treasury already have prepared a report on possible economic measures which could be taken as a reply to the blockade.

Britain still looked to the United States to stand solidly beside her in event of a showdown on Japan's demand for wider authority over the foreign areas of China and British newspaper correspondents in the United States reported that American public opinion is "hardening" rapidly against the Japanese.

French quarters reported yesterday that Britain and France had asked the United States to co-operate with them in a co-ordinated plan for policing the Far East.

Goebbels Hints Of Anschluss In Danzig Talk

'Political Frontiers Disappear,' He Tells Cheering Throng

By the Associated Press.

Free City of Danzig, June 18.—Danzig is German, and "no amount of diplomacy or power politics can change this fact," German Propaganda Minister Goebbels told a cheering audience here today.

Goebbels spoke at the closing session of Danzig's culture week, largely in explanation of Nazi ideas on culture.

"Before us stands a Reich strong and solid," he said. "Behind us stands the nation; over us stands the Fuehrer.

"Powerful means for our defense stand at our disposal. Since 1933 the German people have grown enormously in strength. Today we are a people under arms. The sword watches over the Reich.

"We need not fear any power in the world. You need have no anxiety for the fate of your city . . . Political frontiers disappear with time, but frontiers formed by blood remain eternal."

In an informal speech last night Goebbels said the union of the Free City with Germany was inevitable and could not be prevented by any power on earth.

In Berlin, Nazis were quick to interpret Goebbels' speech as a new warning to "international intriguers" in general, and Poland in particular, to keep hands off the Free City issue.

Some quarters expected Germany might soon renew pressure for the return of the Free City and for a motor road across the Polish Corridor.

Polish circles showed little concern over Goebbels' speeches, though he was the first German cabinet minister to enunciate German intentions to include Danzig within the fronters of the Reich.

Reich Troops on Move

Officers using this town as a base have made an intensive survey of the 100-mile border which would be of great strategical importance in case of German-Polish conflict over Danzig. More than 20,000 Nazi troops are reported to have moved toward the Slovak-Polish frontier in the past few days.

Clipper Spans Atlantic With 18 Passengers

First Commercial Plane Crosses Sea to Lisbon in 23 Hours

By the Associated Press.

Lisbon, Portugal, June 18.—For the first time in the two-decade history of transatlantic flying—marked by heroism, success and disaster—a commercial airplane today brought a cabinload of passengers from America to Europe.

With all the ease of a train or a ship, the speedy Atlantic Clipper soared from the new world to the old with 18 newspaper reporters and radiomen and 12 crew members—the largest number of persons ever to fly the Atlantic by plane.

Capt. W. D. Culbertson settled the Clipper upon the wind-ruffled waters of the Tagus River at 7:44 p. m. (2:44 p. m. E. S. T.), just 23 hours and 50 minutes out of New York, having flown 3,447 miles at a speed of 152.4 miles per hour.

The 1,050-mile distance from Horta, the Azores, was flown in 7 hours and 31 minutes. A stop of 1 hour and 11 minutes was made at Horta this morning.

The whole "preview" trip, preceding by 11 days introduction of regular passenger service across the Atlantic, had a tea-time casualness.

Thirteen men and five women on the passenger deck slept, dined, read and watched the "cloud country" slip by until they reached Lisbon. And that was about all.

D.C.Girl Killed, 9 Injured in Head-on Crash

7 Slightly Hurt as Cars Collide Near Prince Frederick

An 18-year-old Washington girl was killed last night, a Washington man was hurt critically and eight other people less seriously injured in a head-on collision on the North Beach road near Prince Frederick, Md.

Two of these were from Washington.

Miss Rosemary Hill, of 27 K street northeast, was killed instantly. Bronson Watkins, 33, of 1431 Irving street northeast, was in critical condition in a Prince Frederick hospital with a fractured skull.

Rosemary's sister, Miss Ann Elizabeth Hill, 15, and Robert Metz, 18, suffered minor cuts and bruises.

Maryland State police said the crash occurred when the automobile containing those from Washington, and driven by Watkins, attempted to pass another and ran head-on into one driven by Joseph N. Beardon, 19, of Hillside, Md. Beardon and five passengers in his automobile were slightly injured.

One More Cool Day Forecast, And Then Heat

Thermometer Stays In Low 60's; Angler Killed by Lightning

Out of the Canadian Northwest, a cold front yesterday swept down on Washington, drove the mercury from the withering 90's to the low 60's and brought relief at last from days of all but unbearable heat.

Citizens who donned coats yesterday likely may keep them on until tomorrow, the weatherman predicted last night. Cool weather, with accompanying showers, he said, is expected through today.

But tomorrow, he added, will be "decidedly warmer."

From a record high of 96, the temperature was driven to a low of 63.

According to Weather Bureau forecasters, yesterday's sudden surcease from blistering heat could be credited to a cold mass of air which marched out of the Mackenzie River Valley, through the Hudson Bay region, and southeastward. In the last 24 hours, they said, this cold front has moved from the Pennsylvania-Maryland line toward Central and Southside Virginia, where it will strike today.

Washington bore up well under the burden of .14 inch of rain which drenched its streets, police reporting few traffic accidents traceable directly to weather.

John Jendrick, of Baltimore, was killed instantly yesterday afternoon when lightning struck the boat from which he was fishing off Eastport, Md. The bolt blasted the clothing from his body and hurled him overboard.

His companions, Henry Bowden, of Baltimore, and Howard Lerp, of Accotink County, Md., recovered consciousness half an hour later and went ashore for aid. Jendrick's body was found in two feet of water.

The bodies of two Washington boys who were drowned Saturday in the Anacostia River, while wading off South Capitol street, were recovered yesterday morning by Harbor Police. They were Walter Elmore Washington, 16, of 1529 South Capitol street, and Thomas Muscett, 13, of 1369 South Capitol street, both colored.

King and Queen Rest as Liner Speeds Homeward

Aboard Liner Empress of Britain, June 18 (AP).—King George and Queen Elizabeth spent a quiet Sunday resting from their strenuous month-long tour of North America.

The final events before Their Majesties sailed from Newfoundland late yesterday provided unscheduled excitement to cap the royal tour and give the King and Queen a liberal splashing of salt spray.

A half-gale whipped up a heavy sea in Conception Bay, where the Empress of Britain and her escort ships, the cruisers Glasgow, Southampton and Berwick, were anchored.

Despite the difficulty of having to make an agile jump from a small launch to the ship's ladder on the upsurge of a wave, the King and Queen visited each of the escort ships

Italian Princess Is Sought as 'Beauty Lobbyist'

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 18.—Added today to the list of "big people" connected with the mail fraud and conspiracy trial of William P. Buckner, jr., was a mysterious "missing" woman described as an Italian princess.

Postal inspectors were adamant in keeping secret her identity but it was known they sought her in the belief she was a member of a "beauty lobby" the Government claims Buckner took to Washington to influence legislation favorable to his financial plans.

Due to be subpenaed on his arrival here aboard the Queen Mary tomorrow was the honeymooning Everett Crosby, Bing's brother and business manager.

Dr. Koo Urges West to Call 'Japan's Bluff'

Paris, June 18.—Dr. V. K. Wellington Koo, China's ranking diplomat in Europe, said in an interview today that Europe and the United States risked losing all their interests in the Far East "if they take the Tientsin incident lying down."

"If Japan gets away with Tientsin, she will turn immediately to another concession, for the recent history of both Europe and Asia shows beyond a doubt the futility of trying to turn a tiger into a kitten by giving it a dish of cream.

"At this moment Japan is a war-weary tiger meeting stiff Chinese resistance. Her militarists need a cheap victory and they are trying to get one by bluffing the British

"The West can call that bluff by . . . a boycott of Japanese goods and a ban on exports to Japan . . . Even the threat of it could work wonders."

Bergdoll's Wife Regains $150,000

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 18.—The Government today turned over to Mrs. Grover Cleveland Bergdoll more than $150,000 in cash and securities it seized from her husband when he returned several weeks ago from a 19-year-old exile in Europe to serve a 5-year military sentence as a World War draft dodger.

The valuables were yielded to her attorney, Harry Weinberger, on the ground that they were her property, but no announcement was made concerning Bergdoll's application for return of some $500,000 seized during the war

Eight Drowned In Auto's Plunge

Martinez, Calif., June 18 (AP).—Eight persons drowned and two were saved when their automobile plunged from a levee near Byron today into the San Joaquin River.

The dead were Frank Cissarro, 44; Miss Christina Biagini, 30; Mrs. Clara Biagini, her son, Roy, 6, and Miss Amelia Bellumini, 31, all of San Francisco; Guide Galli, 30, of Byron; Mrs. Bruna Galli, 28, his wife, and Barbara Galli, 4, their daughter.

Saved were Renato Pellegrini, 30, of San Francisco, driver, and an 8-year-old girl.

Scores of Arabs Felled by Bombs In Haifa Market

Jerusalem, June 19 (AP).—Scores of Arabs were killed and wounded early today when two bombs exploded in a Haifa market place.

Troops and police immediately threw a cordon about the area and began transporting the dead and wounded to hospitals.

4 Sought in Plot To Kill King Carol

Bucharest, June 18 (AP).—Four men believed to be attempting to escape abroad after discovery of an alleged plot to assassinate King Carol and members of his government were the objects of a wide search today. Police said seven men arrested yesterday had confessed.

D. C. Attorneys Seek Spiritual Guidance in Manresa Retreat

By Robert Tate Allan.

"You are alone in this chapel, yet not alone, for Christ upon the altar is here with you . . ."

Joseph A. Cantrel, former candidate for Congress from Maryland, knelt alone in a little chapel at Manresa, pondering over the opening phrase of a prayer which has been studied by 16,000 retreatants since 1926—men who somehow seem to get closer to elemental things there.

Leaving lawsuits, telephones, newspapers and radios behind, Contrel and his colleagues from Washington were enjoying the annual lawyers' week-end retreat at the Catholic haven opposite the Naval Academy, on the banks of the Severn.

Now celebrating its silver jubilee in the Archdiocese of Baltimore, and its thirteenth year of activity at Manresa, the lay retreat project is one of the most important movements in the country today, averred the Rev. Robert S. Lloyd, director of Manresa. Over 6,000 men have felt his influence since he left the Georgetown Preparatory School rectorship in 1935 to become Man-

Five Boys Killed PlayingWith Bomb

Mexico City, June 18 (U.P.).—Five boys were killed today when an airplane bomb they were playing with exploded at a field near the airport.

The bomb was one dropped Saturday when Mexican military planes practised bombing. It failed to explode. A man found it today, and the boys were dragging it with a rope when it struck a rock and exploded.

Outlaw Olson Seen in Wisconsin

Hayward, Wis., June 18 (AP).—Bill Metcalfe, resort owner near Hayward, telephoned the sheriff's office tonight that he had seen Ray Olson, fugitive pursued for the slaying of two deputies, near his resort.

Twenty deputies were rushed to the area in automobiles. The clew was the first to Olson's whereabouts since yesterday noon. An airplane, bloodhounds and 200 possemen had combed the area.

China Moves Genghis Khan's Ashes From Modern War's Path

Yulin, North Shensi, China, June 18 (AP).—Genghis Khan, Asia's mightiest conqueror, who fought his way into eastern Europe in the thirteenth century, has come back to China.

The silver casketed dust of the Mongol emperor, whose hordes stormed through this pass in the great wall seven centuries ago to subjugate north China, was borne back yesterday as a national hero.

And it was war such as the great Genghis waged throughout most his life that had disturbed his last resting place.

The casket was removed from its tomb at Etshinhuro, Mongolia, to prevent seizure by Japanese or its use to further organization of a Japanese-sponsored Mongolian state opposed to China.

Representatives of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek and the Chungking government paid homage to the long-dead emperor as his remains were carried through the Great Wall pass by a mounted procession of Chinese officials, Mongol dignitaries and Buddhist Lamas winding between long lines of Chinese citizens waving flags and exploding firecrackers.

The silver casket is to be taken to a secretly prepared mausoleum somewhere in westernmost China.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

GILT OFF THE DOME

A smart maneuver is being offered free to his colleagues by smart Congressman Charles Halleck, the 36-year-old from Indiana, who wears a Phi Beta Kappa key (for high scholarship) . . . Since he voted against the Townsend plan, hundreds of bitter letters have poured in, along with hundreds of sweet letters.

* * * *

Cong. Halleck . . . strategy

Townsendites threaten to send 10 organizers into his district to set up 60 Townsend clubs to defeat him. But when Halleck heard Jim Farley's radio speech denouncing the Republicans who had voted for the bill, he whooped with joy. Now he plans to send copies of Farley's speech to each Townsendite who sent him a rebuke. If the Townsendites get slapped again in the Senate this week, Congressmen won't worry much about being on the black list.

* * * *

Strictly off the record, but with a shy hope that it will get into headlines all over the world, members of the King's entourage confided to Washingtonians that Canadian politicians are dumfounded, panicked and stampeded by the popularity of the King and Queen in Canada.

Those politicians who have been lukewarm toward London (say the King's men) must now revise their tactics and show more devotion to the Empire. Wouldn't it be too bad if nobody printed it?

"—Cabinet member on a chair"

Apparently no one has quite enjoyed being on the Supreme Court so much as Justice Felix Frankfurter . . . His ebullience has delighted his friends and observers who are connoisseurs of judicial humors. His pet long words, his legal niffties and paradoxes are followed avidly by the myriads of lawyers who dwell in this Capital. One of his favorite observations off duty is "I am a prisoner of the Supreme Court" to explain why his movements and utterances are not so free as they were. If so, he is the happiest of prisoners. One reason is that his health and digestion are excellent, and he finds the High Court no more formidable than a Harvard classroom.

* * * *

At Cabinet meetings Attorney General Frank Murphy is now apt to be kidded a little because the pious, ascetic, often inscrutable Attorney General stood up on a chair at the royal garden party to get a better look at the King and Queen.

* * * *

When the American submarine Squalus and the English submarine Thetis sank in rapid succession, anywhere in the Capital you could hear:

"And now if a French submarine sinks——"

Within a few hours after the French submarine Phenix sank talk of sabotage was audible all over Washington.

But naval men are superstitious about things happening in cycles of three . . .

"—they forgot Braddock's lesson"

* * * *

One Congressman who dropped in at a meeting of the Workers Alliance at which a few meek Communists were rumored to be present asserted afterward:

"What America needs is a radical party composed exclusively of third generation Americans whose grandfathers fought in the Civil War, who have never read Karl Marx or been to Europe, and who would call themselves 'Sons of Ethan Allen' or something else 100 per cent American. That wouldn't frighten anyone."

* * * *

CAPITAL CAVIAR: Solitary soldiers scattered in the White House front yard with fixed bayonets, standing in the open still as statues during the royal visit, caused some smiles and ribaldry . . . There were semi-comic observations about the menace of the White House squirrels, and someone observed that even Gen. Braddock had learned to hide behind trees . . . Maybe a few soldiers ought to be kept on the lawn to thrill the tourists.

People who have seen them both in action say that of the four Roosevelt boys and the four Windsor boys, Jimmy is most like George VI and Franklin, jr., is most like the Duke of Windsor . . . The parallel may be carried too far . . .

Some who went to the White House musicale for the royal pair are saying the choice of Marian Anderson and Kate Smith to sing for the King was a little on the side of ideology and whimsy.

Public to Beat Neutrality Bill, Clark Predicts

Expects Reactions in Opinion as on Court Proposal

By the Associated Press.

Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, predicted yesterday that public reaction would defeat Administration efforts to repeal the arms embargo of the neutrality law.

Contending it was public disapproval that thwarted President Roosevelt's efforts to enlarge the Supreme Court in 1937, Clark said, "the same thing is likely to happen now that happened in the Supreme Court fight."

The Missouri Senator, a leader of a bloc of Senators opposing Administration-sponsored neutrality legislation, said it would be "a simple matter" for his group to filibuster if it chose, but that it had no disposition to adopt those tactics.

"We are going to debate this question on its merits," Clark declared, "and I believe we can beat it. I think that the public reaction to this debate will be such that the bill will be beaten when the vote comes on it."

8 Organizations Urge Defeat

The National Council for Prevention of War and seven other organizations urged defeat of the Administration bill in an open letter yesterday to members of Congress. They called proposed repeal of the arms embargo "unneutral."

Other groups signing the letter were the Fellowship of Reconciliation, the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom, World Peaceways, War Registers League, Keep America Out of War Congress, Youth Committee Against War and the Labor Antiwar Council.

The Administration legislation, embodied in a bill introduced by Representative Bloom (Democrat), of New York, may be brought to a vote in the House this week. Leaders hoped to clear away other pending matters and take up the bill by Wednesday.

The Bloom bill would repeal the section of the present law which prohibits the sale of arms, ammunition and implements of war to belligerents.

It would require belligerents to obtain title in this country to all supplies, including arms, purchased here. The President would be given authority to fix war time combat zones from which American shipping and travelers would be banned.

Senate Delay Expected

A majority report of the House Foreign Affairs Committee said yesterday that the legislation would serve the double purpose of discouraging war and preventing this country's involvement in any foreign conflict. A minority previously had called the bill "unneutral."

While the Senate is expected to delay discussion of proposed changes in the neutrality law until after the House acts, the Senate Foreign Relations Committee will take up Wednesday various proposals for amending the present law.

One embodies all of Secretary of State Hull's recommendations, but a bill by Senator Gillette (Democrat), of Iowa, would put into effect the combat zone provision. Chairman Pittman (Democrat), of Nevada, has introduced legislation which would put all products, including arms, on a "cash and carry" basis.

Some opponents of the Administration proposals said they believed there was a strong possibility that the Senate committee might report to the Senate without recommendation all of nearly a dozen bills dealing with the subject. Pittman would not comment on this.

Gannett Suggests Roosevelt Resign, Let U.S. 'Rebuild'

By the Associated Press.

Frank Gannett, Rochester, N. Y., newspaper publisher, suggested yesterday that President Roosevelt resign at once, so "we can begin to rebuild a dynamic surging America."

"Instead of paying attention to Mr. Ickes' senseless third term propaganda," Gannett said in a statement, "the country should be considering how it can induce President Roosevelt to cut short his second term. The sooner he resigns the better."

He declared:

"We cannot have four years more of fomented class antagonisms and of mounting deficits. We cannot have the Nation's solvency further imperiled."

U. S. Seeks to Settle San Francisco Strike

San Francisco, June 18 (AP).—The Federal Maritime Labor Board today took a hand in the waterfront dispute that has halted virtually all cargo movement over San Francisco Bay docks.

Board Chairman Robert W. Bruere arrived today, arranged conferences with representatives of the Labor Department here, union officials and employers.

issuance of currency. Thomas also has proposed mandatory legislation to force the President to lower further the gold content of the dollar.

McCarran has proposed to fix the domestic price of silver at $1.04 an ounce and force issuance of silver certificates at the legal rate of $1.29 an ounce for all of the silver purchased.

A bipartisan group, led by Senator Glass (Democrat), Virginia, has announced opposition to continuation of Presidential powers to devalue the dollar.

Another measure on the before-June-30 "must" list is the new relief bill passed by the House last week. Existing funds will be exhausted by the year's end. The Senate Appropriations Committee will take up the $1,735,000,000 measure tomorrow, with economy advocates striving to hold the appropriation to that figure and others seeking to increase individual items.

A House-approved provision setting up a three-man administrative board instead of the present single administrator was opposed by Senator Byrnes (Democrat), South Carolina, on grounds such a system would be less efficient.

Majority Leader Barkley (Democrat), Kentucky, expressed hope the measure could be reported to the Senate this week, and said it would receive right of way.

Facing no June 30 deadline is the issue of neutrality, which threatens to keep Congress in session for some weeks if the Administration attempts to put through the Senate the Bloom House bill that would drop the mandatory arms embargo clauses of the present act.

Eight peace organizations yesterday called for defeat of the Bloom measure, while Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, predicted public reaction would kill arms embargo repeal as, he said, it caused defeat of the President's court reorganization plan.

Proposed changes in the social security law also may be advanced toward enactment. The amendments approved by the House are to be considered early in the week by the Senate Finance Committee.

Final action may be taken on the $1,218,000,000 farm bill now in the hands of a joint Senate-House committee appointed to settle the differences between measures passed by the two bodies.

Hatch Bill Revived

The Republican minority in the House served notice yesterday it would seek to force a vote on the Hatch bill restricting political activity by Federal employes, if the measure was not brought up soon by Administration leaders.

Representative Martin, of Massachusetts, House Republican leader, said that if the Judiciary Committee did not send the measure to the floor quickly, his party would circulate a petition to force a vote in the House.

"We have enough Democrats to join us in a petition to bring the bill to the House floor," Martin said.

"A majority of the House is for the bill and is entitled to record its will."

Representative Celler (Democrat), New York, acting chairman, expressed opinion that restriction on political activity of relief workers contained in the $1,735,000,000 relief bill just approved by the House might eliminate necessity for the Hatch measure.

However, Representatives Hobbs (Democrat), Alabama, and Michener (Republican), Michigan, other members of the committee, joined Martin in contending that provisions of the Hatch bill should be made permanent, rather than a part of relief legislation which expires in a year.

Democrats In Wisconsin Urge 3d Term

Murphy Eulogizes The La Follettes at Madison Luncheon

By the Associated Press.

Milwaukee, June 18.—The Democratic Party Organization of Wisconsin last night adopted a resolution stating it was the group's "hope and prayer" that President Roosevelt be re-elected for a third term. The action was taken by 1,200 attending a rally of the liberal wing of the Wisconsin Democratic Party.

Murphy Praises La Follette

By International News Service.

Madison, Wis., June 18.—Attorney General Murphy today characterized the La Follettes as the "finest political stock in the Nation today."

He spoke at a luncheon preceding the fourteenth annual memorial service to the late Senator Robert M. La Follette, sr., with the latter's two sons, former Gov. Philip F. La Follette and Senator Robert M. La Follette, jr., sitting beside him.

Murphy was honor guest at a dinner attended by members of the Progressive Party, justices of the State Supreme Court and other officials.

Seen as Invitation

His outspoken praise was taken by many observers to be an invitation to Wisconsin Progressives to rejoin the New Deal from which they were led by the La Follette brothers last year.

His statement, in fact, was regarded on some sides as the opening gun in a campaign to effect a coalition between the Progressive Party and New Deal Democrats for the Presidential campaign in 1940.

Murphy described young "Bob," who comes up for re-election next years, as one who follows closely in the footsteps of his father, and added, "No man is more respected in the National Capitol."

Criticized New Deal

Under the aegis of the then Gov. La Follette, the State's old Progressive Party was launched on a national scale last year, but has been inactive since "Phil's" defeat at the hands of a Republican-Democratic coalition last fall. Senator La Follette had previously criticized the New Deal for its Federal spending policies.

Neither of the La Follettes would comment on Murphy's statements after the luncheon at which he spoke.

The three were close together, however, at the cemetery rites later. Considered significant was the absence of William D. Carroll, chairman of the State Democratic Committee, listed by New Deal adherents as "reactionary."

Richey Hits High Cost of Government

Says if Hoover Had Present Taxes, Deficit Would Have Been Cut

The increased cost of the Federal Government since President Roosevelt took office is due not only to the higher cost of relief, but in part to the added cost of all branches of the Government, Lawrence Richey, secretary to former President Hoover said yesterday. He issued a statement comparing the Federal budgets and Government expenditures under the Hoover and Roosevelt Administrations.

Richey said the Roosevelt deficit for his eight years in office was estimated by Mr. Roosevelt to be $20,261,000,000, while Mr. Hoover during the years 1929 to 1933 increased the debt only $1,021,000,000. In each case he deducted the amount of outstanding loans which are considered recoverable.

The mounting deficits under the Roosevelt Administration were incurred notwithstanding the rising taxes for the periods, Richey said. By comparing two four-year fiscal periods, one Mr. Hoover's Administration, and the other the last four years of Mr. Roosevelt's, Richey said that if the same measures of taxation had been applied by Mr. Hoover as are now applied by President Roosevelt, the national debt, instead of increasing during Mr. Hoover's four years in office, would have been cut in half.

Only Veterans' Funds Lower

Of the normal expenditures of the Government, only the veterans' allowances have decreased since Mr. Roosevelt took office, Richey added.

In 1932 the legislative, judicial and executive departments were maintained at a cost of $604,000,000, while in the 1940 budget the amount which is expected to be needed for this purpose is $865,000,000, his statement said. The interest on the public debt, which in 1932 was $599,000,000, according to the budget figures for 1940, will reach $1,060,000,000.

N. A. M. to Tell Senate Of Labor Act Troubles

Spokesmen for the National Association of Manufacturers will present "the first composite picture of industry's handicaps under the national labor relations act and its administration by the NLRB," before the Senate Labor Committee today, the association said in a statement last night.

John C. Gall, counsel for the N. A. M. and its board chairman, Charles B. Hook, will tell of the experiences of 7,500 manufacturers under the act, it was announced.

1,500 Britons 'Prisoners' in Tientsin Area

Japan Tightens Blockade; 48-Hour Food Supply Left

By the Associated Press

Shanghai (Monday), June 19.—Fifteen hundred Britons were virtual prisoners today within the British and French concessions in Tientsin as the Japanese blockade entered the sixth day.

British authorities in the North China port urged their nationals not to move beyond the limits of the concessions in view of increasing animosity toward them and with the issue between Japan and Britain sharpened by Japanese declarations of determination to increase the pressure unless the British discontinued aid to China.

Only three Britons were reported to have passed the Japanese barricades Saturday and Sunday.

Sterner Measures Threatened

Gen. Hamma, commander of the Japanese garrison in Tientsin, yesterday expressed determination to carry on restrictions "until Britain abandons her policy of assisting Chiang Kai-shek, and the British concession in Tientsin collapses."

He was quoted as threatening "tighter isolation measures" if the British undertook economic reprisals, and his statement stressed Japan's belief the United States would not support any economic measures Britain might attempt.

At the end of five days of the blockade, imposed originally because British refused to hand over four Chinese wanted by the Japanese for the assassination of a customs official, almost all business had stopped completely.

Food supplies had been reduced dangerously with a further shortage and higher prices expected.

[Tightening of the blockade today deprived the concessions of all fresh food supplies, International News Service reported. Japanese patrol boats in the Hai River prevented small food vessels from proceeding upstream to the British and French concession wharves, cutting off the foreign areas from shipments by water as well as by land.

Food for Only 48 Hours

[The concession has a food supply sufficient for only 48 hours, British authorities announced, according to the United Press.

[Large stores of flour and rice in the concession's warehouses soon may be depleted because of the "packing" of the concession area with Chinese by Japanese military commanders.

[Japanese sentries at the barricaded entrances to the British concession allowed Chinese to enter in large numbers, but permitted few of them to leave.

[Children suffered from a shortage of milk when the Japanese halted Russian milkmen at the barriers. The price of meats tripled and vegetables, even of questionable freshness, were almost unobtainable.

[British authorities were understood to be considering a formal proposal that Admiral Harry E. Yarnell, commander of the United States Asiatic Squadron, who will arrive at Tientsin Tuesday on an inspection visit, be approved as a neutral mediator to seek a settlement lifting the blockade. Japanese insisted, however, that the situation is "beyond mediation."—Editor's note.]

Americans Treated Politely

While British were unable to leave the zones without being made to undress and possibly undergo rough treatment, Americans as well as other foreigners usually were able to pass the barricades without difficulty. The Japanese apparently were making an effort not to inconvenience Americans.

A British soldier, whom a Japanese gendarme apprehended in Japanese territory, was released after questioning. G. A. Smith, a British exporter arrested Saturday following an argument with a Chinese policeman outside the concession, still was held in Japanese headquarters.

Allied Embargo Seen As Threat to Tokyo

The Foreign Policy Association said yesterday that possible severance of trade by the western powers was a "critical threat" to Japan in the present controversy over foreign concessions in China.

Such an eventuality would be a heavy blow to the Japanese economy and to that nation's ability to carry on its China adventure, said a report prepared for the private research organization by T. A. Bisson.

He estimated that three-fourths of Japan's war supplies come from Great Britain and the United States.

Bisson said the two years of warfare in China had weakened Japan's domestic economic position, but added that it would be "premature" to conclude that a collapse was imminent.

"The experience of recent years," he said, "has shown that the reserves of modern economic society can be stretched for an indefinite period without reaching the breaking point."

Bisson expressed the opinion that an Anglo-Soviet mutual aid pact would "exert a profound influence of the Far Eastern position."

4-H Club Delegates Place Wreath on Tomb of Unknown

The 172 delegates to the National 4-H Club encampment yesterday placed a wreath on the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier at Arlington Cemetery. While a soldier plays "Taps," Wilma Schaefer, of Montpelier Center, Vt., and Alan Oviat, of Huron, S. Dak., stand in reverence before the tomb after placing a wreath at the base of the monument

Pausing in a busy Sunday program of church attendance and visits to the Agriculture Department's experimental farm, 173 delegates to the National 4-H Club encampment paid tribute to the Unknown Solier at Arlington Cemetery yesterday.

Alan Oviatt of Huron, S. Dak., and Wilma E. Schaefer, of Montpeller Center, Vt., placed a wreath on the Tomb in behalf of their fellow campers.

Earlier the delegates worshiped in churches including historic Christ Church in Alexandria, favorite of George Washington, and joined in a nature walk in Rock Creek Park, before visiting the experimental farm in Arlington.

Climaxing the day's activities were vesper services in the Agriculture Department auditorium, where the campers heard a recital by the department's mixed chorus of 40 voices. Conducting the services were Washington Girl Reserves and Hi-Y boys, including James Bouton, Katherine Hanley, Richard Barr, Dorothy Hanley and Frank Carr.

Delegates and State leaders will hold a joint conference on "Leadership in Democracy" and problems arising in farm work will be discussed in today's sessions.

Lawyers Find Peace at Retreat

Arriving at Manresa late Friday afternoon, the men "checked in" with Capt. Bernard F. Garvey, local attorney, doffed coats, and hurried to their individual rooms, which are furnished with a prayer stand and devotions book, crucifix, washstand, bed and other equipment in the three-story structure.

The "captain," appointed at the end of each annual retreat season, scurried about making appointments for the various retreat duties, electing Daniel T. Doherty, storekeeper; Victor Mersch, local deputy register of wills, sacristan; Joseph A. Cantrel, reader for prayers at mass. Charles Fahy, counsel for the National Labor Relations Board, and Charles McGovern, general counsel for the Industrial Alcohol Institute, would serve as readers at breakfast.

Have Periods Alone

Earle Ready, treasurer of the Washington Manresa unit, of which Dr. M. D'Arcy Magee is president; A. R. McCallum, Stephen Ingham, Arthur Fay, Bernard Long, Jeremiah O'Conner, Bernard Wise, Frank Reidy, George Degnan, Raymond Garrity, James Toomey, William Kelly, James B. Flynn, Leo Harlow and James J. Hayden all assisted in the services, between which the men would drop into the chapel for a 10-minute period alone.

Also dropping down for the retreat were Case Rafter, an Episcopalian; Charles Camalier, Georgetown University law school student, and Charles E. Robertson, a manufacturer.

Appointed reader for examination of conscience and litany of St. Joseph, Rossa F. Downing yesterday afternoon was honored by brother barristers for his pioneer work in the lawyers' retreats, and presented with a gold watch.

Baltimore Police Ate

First "captain" of the lawyers' group, he joined the late Judge James F. Smith, of the Court of Customs Appeals, and William J. Neale, associated with the Justice Department in the Wilson Administration, in launching the unit in 1927. Neale was server for the 6:45 mass.

Albert Kirschner's insistent bell-clanging brought retreatants into the dining hall for their evening meal of crab cakes and French fried potatoes.

"We had a bunch of Baltimore policemen up here until Friday morning," chuckled Father Lloyd at the table, "and I've never seen anyone eat so much in my life."

The Washington police, first section, are scheduled to come for a retreat from July 28 to 31, and the second section from August 1-3, he added. Men of Holy Comforter parish will stay from June 23-26. Maj. Brown, of the Metropolitan Police Department, attended last year's police retreat.

Between devotional services, after supper, some men passed on to the porch as darkness was falling. A few lounged on the steps watching motorboats on the calm river. Pipes, cigarettes, cigars came out. Here was spiritual calmness—calmness typified in the marble figure of Jesus, which stood on a base near the water's edge.

Back in the chapel, outside the door of which was a portrait of Father DeL. McConnell, long a moving spirit in the retreat movement, the men assembled for the Rosary service. Father Ott conducted it, assisted by Lawyers William Kelly, Arthur Fay and Bernard Long.

"It is very easy for man to forget God," the priest was saying, "and to neglect the more beautiful things of life."

"We need the substantial truths which have stood the test of time . . . rather than the ephemeral excogitations of some misguided mind . . ."

Planes Comb Md., Fail to Spot Elusive 'Fox'

Kalec Wins; Mary Campbell, Who Soloed 3 Weeks Ago, Second

Six airplanes scorched over 900 square miles of Maryland countryside yesterday in an aerial fox hunt.

Winner of the hunt, which took off from College Park Airport under the sponsorship of the Washington Air Derby Association, was George Kalec, newspaper photographer and experienced flier. Second prize went to Miss Mary Campbell, Roentgenologist at Emergency Hospital, who made her first solo flight only three weeks ago. Miss Campbell, a recent University of Maryland graduate, tied with V. C. Tompkins, builder, but won on the toss. It was the first meet for both.

The fox was George C. Brinkerhoff, proprietor of the airport. With a 45-minute headstart, he landed four times in a 30-mile square area, divided into quadrants, and pinned down a 6-foot marker. The hunters, knowing only that there was a marker in each quadrant, were required to locate them on the maps they carried

None was able to spot the fox in the air or to catch him before his return to the airport.

Diplomat Immune? Not to Auto Thief

Col. Rene Weiser, attache of the French Embassy, found that diplomatic immunity was no defense against thieves yesterday morning, when he woke up to find his coupe missing from the garage under his house at 3109 Woodley road northwest.

Possible international incidents were averted by Officer Lionel Koucher, of the Traffic Department, who found the missing car parked in the 400 block of New York avenue northwest a little after noon, still in good condition, diplomatic tags and all.

Army Ready For Retreat on Plane Orders

If Cash Isn't Voted by July 1, Cancellations Will Be in Prospect

By the Associated Press.

The Army Air Corps is well on its way to a flying start toward its treble expansion, without waiting for the formal signal from Congress of a $292,000,000 appropriation.

If the funds are not voted by July 1, the opening of a new fiscal year, some quick countermanding of orders is in prospect.

More than 1,000 men already have been enlisted, officials said yesterday, toward the approximately 25,000 to be added in the next two years.

Planes have been delivered to some of the nine civilian schools that will train student pilots.

The latest of a series of orders for planes, a $2,500,000 contract for nearly 100 basic combat craft, was made contingent on approval of the appropriation pending in the House.

(Actual funds, voted to forestall manufacturing delays, were available for war planes costing $69,000,000 that were ordered last month.)

Only by such disregard of customary deliberate governmental procedure will it be possible to reach the goal of 5,500 or more planes by mid-1941, War Department officials believe.

Some 750 recruits were enlisted for the Air Corps in May and a like number are to be added this month. Some transferred from other branches, and others were taken from a waiting list of about 2,000 eligibles.

These men will be trained as mechanics. Ready to start training as pilot-officers are 1,268 eligibles, comprising the largest waiting list in history. Of these 370 will enter the private training schools, and finish off at Randolph and Kelly fields, Texas, the "West Point of the air."

Big scale recruiting of additional pilots and mechanics is to start next month.

Farm Program Charged With Weakening Morale

By the Associated Press.

The House Public Lands Committee charged yesterday that the Administration's farm security program tended to "weaken the morale of the farm population and regiment farm families and farm practices under a strong centralized Federal supervision."

The committee made this assertion in a report, prepared for submission to the House tomorrow, recommending legislation by Representative Peterson (Democrat), of Georgia, to provide debt-free homesteads for farm families.

Poor Wheat Crop Forecast in Italy

Rome, June 18 (AP).—As a result of one of the coldest, wettest springs in recent years, Italy may suffer a setback this year in her "battle of grain"—Il Duce's campaign to produce all the wheat Italy needs.

Wheat-growers say the crop is extremely poor in many sections and may fall considerably below the 292,000,100 bushels which Italy needs to feed her 44,000,000 inhabitants.

White House Police Win Pistol Shoot

The White House Police pistol team, comprised of R. G. Ford, J. J. Cash, E. Reynolds, R. P. Hallon and E. L. Warden, won first prize yesterday for the Class A team in the third annual Rockview (N. J.) tournament. They scored 1,474 out of a possible 1,500 points.

George Stewart, of the Washington Metropolitan Police, tied the winning score of 298 of a possible 300 points in the individual contest but lost to William Applegate, of the Philadelphia Police Department, whose rapid fire score brought him first place.

Conductor's Goat A Business, Not An Idiosyncrasy

Stockbridge, Mass., June 18.—Dr. Artur Rodzinski, conductor of the Cleveland Symphony, announced today he was ready to invade the New York milk market with goat's milk at 40 cents a quart.

The maestro of White Goat Farm is not quite prepared to dominate the Metropolitan goat milk supply, since the total yield of his 40 Swiss goats now totals only 70 quarts a day. But more goats are on the way, for nature works quickly in Housatonic Valley.

Every Sunday scores of visitors from the Berkshire area descend upon White Goat Farm to see how the goats are coming on. As they approach, Dr. Rodzinski stalks out of the house growling Polish imprecations. Actually he is very glad to see them. He feels he is doing missionary work for goat breeding.

"I feel like a pioneer," he said today, squinting his eyes and thrusting out his jaw. "I don't care about the money; I'll be satisfied if I can break even after two more years of it."

Garbage Can Full of Flies?

Here's what to do. Garbage pails should be sprayed regularly with Bee Brand Insect Spray. This kills flies and destroys their eggs. Flies inside the house can be luckily killed by closing all doors and windows and filling each room with a mist of Bee Brand. In 15 minutes, sweep up all dead flies.

Don't confuse Bee Brand Spray with other insecticides. It has no nasty kerosene smell—only a clean cedar fragrance that soon disappears. And Bee Brand really kills flies, mosquitoes and other flying insects quick—yet it's entirely safe to use in the home. Don't waste money on cheap, weak, smelly stuff. Get Bee Brand and get rid of flies. Insist on the genuine, quick-killing Bee Brand Insect Spray—in the red and yellow can. It's sold with a guarantee of satisfaction or your money back. 17¢ ½-pt.; 29¢ pt.; 49¢ qt.

NOTE: You can also kill flies and mosquitoes, as well as roaches and ants, with Bee Brand Insect Powder. Read directions on can.

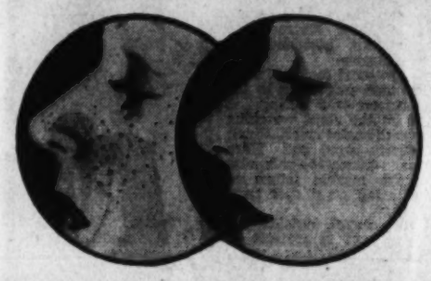
BLACKHEADS and OPEN PORES



EXCELLENT NEW SOYBEAN CREAM REFINES, BEAUTIFIES AND SOFTENS THE SKIN

Here is exciting news for every woman suffering from run-down complexion, and for every woman seeking a clearer, fairer skin.

Soybean oil and other natural extracts have now been combined to make a cream that helps to wipe away the frequent causes of blackheads, coarse pores, muddy complexion, lifeless skin and premature wrinkles.

The entire texture of the skin is improved by the consistent use of NYCE, the cream that is so nice to your complexion.

Soybean is a wonderful plant. For 5,000 years it has been a mainstay of Oriental diet. Now it is one of our most important American crops and the United States Government is so impressed it has sent out a bulletin stating "The soybean deserves wider recognition."

Through NYCE, the natural oil of the soybean has for the first time been made available in a skin cream. If you make NYCE a part of your daily beauty ritual, you will find that it helps to animate the skin, to keep it smooth and satin-textured, to hold its clearness and bloom.

NYCE acts in four ways to enhance the beauty of your complexion—no matter whether you have a dry or oily type of skin—

FIRST. NYCE seeps into the pores without stretching or straining them. It sinks in deeply, softens the waxy accumulations, loosens dirt, dust and grime, and floats them to the skin's surface—where they are easily wiped away.

SECOND. It renders the pores so clean that they can "breathe"—fresh air can enter the pores to stimulate and revive the jaded skin. Thoroughly cleansed and revived, the pores naturally tend to resume their normal small size, and the skin becomes more refined in its appearance.

THIRD. NYCE supplies the skin with oils resembling the natural oils of the skin, so that the skin is lubricated practically as Nature does it herself. This gives the skin more softness, smoothness and suppleness. It helps to prevent dryness, tightness and roughness—which may cause ugly premature lines, wrinkles and the withered look of age.

FOURTH. NYCE is used as a night cleanser and as a daytime powder base. Thus for 24 hours a day NYCE brings benefit to your skin . . . helps to keep it FRESH and protects it against complexion faults that make the skin look dull, old and lifeless. Every application of NYCE is beneficial.

NYCE costs only 55c a jar. Large jar (more than triple size), $1.50. The Vita Health Food Co., 819 12th St. N.W., and 3040 14th St. N.W. Mail and phone orders filled—Columbia 2980.

Murphy Gets Challenge to Back Hatch Bill

Woodruff Tells Him To Prove Sincerity Of Economy Views

By International News Service.

"Miracle of miracles" was the characterization Representative Woodruff (Republican), of Michigan, yesterday gave to a recent address by Attorney General Murphy, advocating a reduction of 1,000,000 persons and $1,000,000,000 in Federal, State and local government pay rolls.

"Of course, the Attorney General is dead right, particularly when he says that when the public pay roll is taking 13 cents out of each family's dollar of income, it is too much."

"But what does Mr. Murphy propose to do about it? . . .

"Let Mr. Murphy first show his sincerity by persuading Democratic National Chairman Farley and his publicity man, Charles Michelson, to lay off the Hatch bill which would outlaw pernicious political activities.

"These two gentlemen have been reported in the press during the last week as busily engaged in lobbying against this bill which now is bottled up in the House Judiciary Committee.

"Let Mr. Murphy demonstrate his devotion to a nonpolitical civil service by denouncing the behind-the-stage activities of his national committee, and by publicly using his influence in behalf of this meritorious bill."

After citing an increase of 320,000 persons in the Federal pay roll since President Roosevelt took office in 1933, Woodruff said he doubted Murphy would do much to reduce the pay roll.

"As Governor of Michigan," Woodruff said, "he did not exactly have a reputation for pruning pay rolls. As a matter of fact the number of State employes in Michigan increased from 13,585 on December 31, 1935, the last full year of the Fitzgerald administration, to 17,558 on December 31, 1937, the last full year of the Murphy regime—and the pay roll was increased from $1,448,089 to $2,114,309."

Union Protests Firing of New Harvard Teachers

Cambridge, Mass., June 18.—The appointments of many younger members of the Harvard faculty, including ten assistant professors, have been terminated within the last two weeks, it was learned today, with the issuance of a letter of protest by the Cambridge Union of University Teachers, an A. F. of L. affiliate representing about 200 Harvard faculty members.

The letter was addressed to members of a faculty committee which submitted last March to Dr. James Bryant Conant, president of the university, a report which included among its recommendations a detailed plan for reorganization of tenure conditions within the university. The letter charges certain portions of the report "have been singled out for exclusive enforcement."

Members of the committee to whom the letter is addressed include Associate Justice Frankfurter of the United States Supreme Court.

Marine Union Agent Refuses Trial by 'Reds'

Emerson Declares Communists Run C. I. O. Sailors' Body

Ralph Emerson, of 3316 Mount Pleasant street northwest, suspended legislative representative for the National Maritime Union, yesterday announced his refusal to attend any "mock trial" in New York City, called by "outright Communists or pro-Communist" officials of the N. M. U. The union had summoned him to a hearing starting today.

"The Communists are in control of the union," Emerson told The Post, "and I couldn't represent them anyway, so I cheerfully accept my dismissal. This fight is strictly a case of Communists against anti-Communists, and I'm with the anti-Communists."

Asserting that "no reflection has been cast upon the legislative work that I have done in Washington for the past two and a half years on behalf of the maritime workers," Emerson in an open letter to the union membership claims that the only charge against him is that he is not a Communist.

Emerson said he continues to be "an ardent believer in the Roosevelt Administration and the C. I. O.," but warned that the time has come for the Administration and C. I. O. "to curb the 'screwballs' who attempt to hang on the outer fringe of the New Deal."

The Relief Bill

After investigations and hearings extending over nearly a year and a half, the Senate Committee on unemployment and relief last January issued a report advocating the creation of a unified public-works agency in place of the WPA. Elimination of white-collar projects was also advised and the committee recommended that local governments be required by law to cover a fixed percentage of the costs of work-relief projects.

The relief bill as passed by the House does not provide for any extensive overhauling of the WPA. But it does make an effort to improve the existing system at the points where it is weakest. Significantly, the House proposals have a good deal in common with the more elaborate reform plans that emerged from the Senate committee after prolonged and conscientious study on the part of Senator Byrnes and his colleagues.

The House bill does not completely eliminate the boondoggling projects. But it does much to discourage them by requiring localities to defray part of the cost, heretofore financed entirely by the Federal Government. The much-criticized Federal Theater project is, moreover, banned outright.

The House bill also requires the local sponsors of all WPA projects to assume an "adequate" share of the costs. This vague mandate does not provide the effective check upon unnecessary work-relief outlays afforded by a statutorily fixed percentage requirement. But it does show a greater determination on the part of the House to make local governments assume a reasonable share of the financial burden of work relief.

Thus, in a number of respects the House bill reflects a new awareness of the basic defects of the present highly centralized, yet loosely co-ordinated, Federal work-relief system. While most of the effort has been directed toward improving administrative policies and procedures, without effecting any very far-reaching changes in the present organization of the WPA, the House is moving in the right direction.

It is to be hoped, therefore, that when the relief bill leaves the Senate it will emerge with the House safeguards against wasteful expenditures intact, and with the mandatory provisions for local financing of WPA projects retained and strengthened.

Anachronism

Most professional lobbyists, as they read the testimony in the trial of the Philippine Railway bond case, must curl their lips at these tales of parties, show girls and champagne. It is such ancient and amateurish technique.

In Washington lobbying has become a sophisticated and highly professionalized business practiced for the most part quite openly and even proudly by experts of great dexterity. Outright bribery, whether in cash or Sybaritic delights, plays little part nowadays. Money, of course, is spent freely, but lots of it goes to the lobbyists themselves. There are many of them who are reputed to get salaries larger than the President's.

Cruder times had cruder methods. It was no secret, for instance, that the Bank of the United States had Senators and Representatives on its pay roll. One of them was the great Daniel Webster, who once wrote to remind the bank that through some bookkeeping oversight his regular emolument had not been forwarded.

But gradually a little more finesse was put into the business. In the fifties the technique had advanced to the point where bribes were not delivered in bulk. The venal Congressman was allowed to win his subsidy at faro or poker in "The Hall of the Bleeding Heart," on fashionable Pennsylvania avenue. The introduction of the romantic motive was a further refinement. After the Civil War it was discovered that good-looking ladies, especially if they were widows or daughters of officers, were powerfully persuasive.

But all this would be considered bush-league stuff by our great present-day lobbyists. Today very few Congressmen could be tempted by any cash bribe in any form. There are many who could even look Venus right in the eye and stare her down. But there are fewer who can turn an utterly deaf ear to propaganda, to hints from powerfully organized groups, or to threats of political reprisal.

The Treaty Ports

By forceful action at Amoy, Tientsin and Shanghai, and by official pronouncements from Tokyo, the Japanese government has made perfectly clear the purpose and nature of its policy regarding the foreign concessions in China.

The goal is the total and final elimination of the extraterritorial rights enjoyed by British, French, and to a lesser extent Americans. Whether the ultimate intention is formally to transfer these privileges to Japan, or whether it is felt that Japanese military control of the treaty ports is itself sufficient, is not yet clear. But that issue is less important than the evident determination to oust Japan's commercial rivals from their various bases of operations in China.

For Great Britain in particular this is an exceedingly serious matter. The actual British investment in China is estimated at about $750,000,000, excluding all the money spent in building up the colony of Hongkong. To this must be added Great Britain's stake in Chinese trade, largely secured by the physical investment made throughout the past 100 years. A further consideration is the tremendous loss of prestige and consequent injury to other imperial interests which is threatened by Japanese policy.

It is, therefore, understandable that the British government is resisting, to the best of its ability, the squeeze play which Japan is attempting at Amoy and Tientsin, as an obvious dress rehearsal for larger operations at the vital treaty port of Shanghai. Diplomatic resistance, however, has undoubtedly been discounted in advance by Tokyo. If the British are to block the Japanese game something more than protest will be necessary. Yet, the situation in Europe being what it is, Great Britain unaided can scarcely risk anything more than protest.

Although the interests of France and the United States are equally threatened the combined investment of both these countries in China is far less than the British. If Japan gradually seizes everything which French and American nationals possess in China the immediate injury will be felt by relatively few people. Japan, therefore, counts on being able to isolate the British and deal with them singly. This is reflected in the studied moderation which Japanese troops are, for the moment, showing towards French and Americans in the treaty ports. Their turn may be expected when the tougher British nut has been cracked.

That the democracies can thus be isolated, and kept from co-operating for their mutual interests, is another illustration of a great advantage which the dictatorships possess. Whether or not the Japanese aggression against the treaty ports was worked out by prearrangement with Berlin and Rome, the press of those capitals is now enthusiastic about the turn of events. Japan is an ally, and whatever action Japan takes to weaken the democracies will be welcomed as the act of an ally. In the resistance to aggression there is no such common front. Aggression may, therefore, be expected to continue.

There is, however, another element in the Far Eastern situation in respect to which Japanese thinking may be less shrewd. China is as yet far from beaten, and will not be even if every treaty port passes into Japanese hands. If the British, and the other powers concerned, would offer to cede to China the privileges they are near to losing to Japan, the chance of eventually saving something of their threatened investment would be much greater.

This action would be a belated act of simple justice. And if that seems insufficient argument it might also be good business in a part of the world where business prospects for the democracies now look extremely slim.

Student Pilots

If the United States is to maintain pace with other nations, in the development of its air force, the mere accumulation of planes, even of the best available types and models, is not enough.

There must also be, as Col. Lindbergh recently testified before the House Appropriations Committee, increasing attention to aeronautical research, a field in which the United States once led the world but in which it has of late years lagged behind.

And, obviously, the Air Corps must also be provided with trained personnel, including an adequate reserve of qualified pilots and mechanics from which to draw. That is the basic reason for legislation to train 20,000 college students annually as civilian fliers, which favorable Senate action has now brought close to final enactment.

The cost of this training, as defined by the Senate, will amount to an average annual expenditure of not more than $7,000,000. This is a trifling amount in comparison with the total sum the United States is to spend next year for its Air Corps, let alone for all of its defense establishments. But it is fair to assert that no money set aside for defense will, in the long run, produce more constructive results.

Pilots are not made in a day. Nor is it to be anticipated that all of the 20,000 students, who are now encouraged to take air-training courses in some 200 to 300 colleges and universities, will emerge as full-fledged fliers.

But they will, at least, be given opportunity to learn the elements of flying under the best of auspices. In the course of a few years, therefore, a large reserve of thoroughly qualified men will be available for the air force, and for the steadily growing demands of commercial aviation.

Barkers Bitten

Last Friday, at Coney Island, some stickler for peace and quiet tried to obliterate the ancient and respectable trade of barking. Twenty-nine of the most eloquent boardwalk artists were arrested at a swoop. They were cut short in the very middle of their spiels and just as they were getting the folks worked up to a little scientific interest in such phenomena as the anatomical paradox Jojohanna (Is she man or is he woman?) or Alonzo, the wraith-boy, whose singular and inexplicable inability to cast his shadow has baffled the greatest savants of Europe and America.

Now these Coney Island barkers are the very cream of their profession. For smoothness of tongue, for cubic content of lung, they stand to your run-of-the-carnivals barkers as the New York Yankees stand to the champions of the Ragweed League. Had they been plastered with fines and enjoined from any further practice of their arts, a death blow might have been dealt to a whole industry. Surely, if Jojohanna and Alonzo had to depend on the mere winds of chance to blow in the customers they would soon starve.

The law invoked against these 29 boardwalk virtuosi was the municipal ordinance whereby the once flourishing trade of "pulling-in" has been rendered extinct. The pullers-in, you may recall, were specialists employed by East Side clothing merchants to stimulate business. The art consisted of waylaying pedestrians. When the victim regained consciousness he would find himself back on the sidewalk clad in a nifty second-hand tuxedo, his own clothes in a bundle under his arm and his pockets lighter by the weight of several bills.

The ordinance outlawing the art of pulling-in worked, of course, much economic hardship on its practitioners. There is, however, a report, which we have not been able fully to confirm, that many of them subsequently obtained employment as platform loaders in the subway express stations. But it is hard to imagine any trade into which unemployed barkers could be readily absorbed. Their clarity of diction would certainly disqualify them as train announcers and the occupation of running for Congress is woefully overcrowded even now.

Happily, the problem is not yet urgent. The case of the 29 barkers was brought before the enlightened Magistrate De Andrea, a man, apparently, of much social vision. "You can't have an amusement area without barkers," he observed, as he dismissed the complaints. Still, the case is a disturbing portent. With a little more regulation here and a little more restriction there the whole concept of careers open to talents will become as dead as the dodo.

Ho, hum; what a world!—here today and here tomorrow.

Einstein says he has found the key to the universe, but we doubt if it is of value. Our intuition tells us that the universe is padlocked on the outside.

Why not fix up the new-born babe so he can live forever, by giving him a shot of sulfanilamide—or would that too greatly complicate economic, unemployment and old-age pension problems?

Hermit Of The Ozarks

From the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

A man said good-by to the world, the flesh and the New Deal devil in our letter column a short time ago, and he said it rather unctuously. You could almost see him pause while waiting for the roar of the crowd. He has got a shower of "razzberries."

It was an idyll he word-painted in the green glades of the Ozarks. Oh, to be a man with the hoe! He would wake to the silver reveille of the lark, pluck his breakfast from a bending bough, find sermons in stones, worship in the cathedral-like silence of the woods, long starry nights for soul-refreshing reflection—in a word, the life of Riley.

Folks who know the Ozarks have chortled. They see in this fellow a large fat Tory, with a lot of money, earned in the sweat of the bucketshop, a dude-rancher of the deepest dye. Horace's Sabine farm? More likely one of Cicero's sprawling, sumptuous villas.

Recently a wrathy writer has penned "escapist" on the chap's retreating coattails. "Deserter" is another term. And this latest judge to pass sentence wants to know what would become of democracy if everyone with a palace in the Ozarks should nail up the city mansion, drop the portcullis, flood the moat and take to the tall uncut. The spirit that won the wilderness, we are told, knew no such word as quit.

By this time, our Hermit of the Ozarks is doubtless reconsidering that impulse to which he self-pattingly yielded and is sorry he spoke. Right now he is probably telling the mocking birds to pipe down and looking longingly back to the nineteenth hole.

Cure For Unfair Taxation

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In the taxation of incomes the relative ability to pay is recognized as a proper and important consideration. This principle should be applied justly and to the fullest extent desirable. Where two individuals have the same income and the same obligations or absence of obligations to dependents, it does not necessarily follow that they have the same ability to pay taxes. One may be living cheaply in one room, increasing idle money and nonproductive speculation, contributing to unemployment and depression, and contributing relatively little to taxation on real property. The other may be living in a home or apartment for which the proportion of real property taxes is 10 or 20 times that for the one room, and which now requires all of his income to maintain.

The constant construction of better living quarters is the most important factor in the maintenance of prosperity. The taxation of living quarters is an ancient idea that had its beginning when the income of individuals was nobody's business. The building of better homes ought not to be stifled by taxation. Taxes can be paid only from income, or in the alternative the home must be sold and cheaper quarters maintained. It is proper and just that only the incomes of individuals and the land they possess be taxed.

However, if an individual and his descendants are to be forever taxed because of the money spent for the construction of a home, then an allowance should be made in the payment of income taxes. Let us have the income taxes by all means, even higher than is proposed, with property taxes deductible. It could be assumed that those renting living quarters indirectly pay real property taxes, and such taxes, in the proportion covered by rent, also should be deductible. Persons living in Virginia and Maryland and working in the District should be expected to pay only 50 per cent of the normal income tax and be permitted to deduct 50 per cent of the property tax paid in those States.

Taxation proposed in this letter will place the principal burden where it belongs, namely, upon those with substantial incomes who are responsible for the accumulation of idle money, or the excessive use of money for nonproductive speculation with the resulting unemployment, depression and poverty.

An intelligent analysis of the effect of such taxation should lead to the conclusion that it will cure many of our tax problems and unfairness in taxation, make it possible for aged retired persons to continue living in their homes, and make it possible for individuals to provide themselves with better homes, particularly those with the smaller incomes, and thus promote the general welfare and prosperity.

Diploma?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: For years Washington motorists have gazed in wonder on the intriguing jallopies which limp into town from Virginia and Maryland with "Inspected" signs proudly displayed on their windshields. Washingtonians couldn't figure out how it happened. Certainly, when inspection came to Washington it would be careful and strict.

But, after you get your "Inspected" certificate you can go out next week, smash the car, tear off the fenders and break the lights and keep on driving for one year with a green certificate on your windshield. Your car has graduated. It has a diploma.

The Case For Professional Librarians

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: American librarianship has suffered a severe blow. In fact, we have been officially informed that there is no library profession in this country. The President, by naming as Librarian of Congress a man who has never had any experience as a librarian, has plainly indicated that librarianship as a profession is nonexistent. He has given his official sanction to that old fallacy, "Any one can be a librarian," modifying it only by the addition—"if only he be "a gentleman and a scholar," "widely known" and "an administrator." Thus librarians may be created merely by Presidential, gubernatorial or mayorial fiat.

Though the term "librarian" is used rather broadly and is applied to a wide variety of library workers, librarianship consists of much more than a series of technical activities, such as the cataloguing, classifying and circulating of books, the filing of cards, the compiling of bibliographic references, etc. While it is true that the director of a large library, such as the Library of Congress, can find and employ trained and experienced experts for all these technical activities, he himself needs a knowledge of the fundamental principles involved in each.

It has been under the direction of a professional librarian that the Library of Congress has been transformed from a small collection of books of limited service to a truly national library, with services extending throughout the land and an influence felt around the world. Dr. Herbert Putnam, a professional librarian, has been instrumental in originating, fostering and developing the vast number of important and far-reaching services that the Library of Congress is now rendering. What a professional librarian has developed, surely a professional librarian should correlate, direct, expand—nay, none but a professional librarian could be expected to do this so intelligently, so understandingly, so effectively.

Among our leading librarians there is no dearth of "gentlemen and scholars," men "widely known" and of proven administrative ability. Coupled with this, they are thoroughly familiar (as are many of the rank and file of librarians) with the wide range of activities being carried on by the Library of Congress—more familiar than can be any nonlibrarian who may be named. From this group of men, with their broad and successful experience as librarians and their intimate knowledge of the work of the Library of Congress, one may be chosen who can "stand on the shoulders" of the present Librarian of Congress and carry into still greater spheres of usefulness, without loss of time, energy and effectiveness, the many important services thus far so nobly advanced.

Genes Vs. Chromosomes

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I always like to think that Washington Post editorials stand for leadership in the realm of thought. So I choked a bit over "The Genetic Treason" in today's paper. Not, I assure you, because I have any predilection for "the gospel according to Marx." But just that this editorial's highly emotionalized and uninformed approach to scientific fact is as harmful to the progress of knowledge as the supposed Communist manifesto might have been.

There is only one approach to truth, and that is an unbiased desire for the facts. Scientific theories, unlike facts, are mere guesses thrown out in front, like the headlights of an automobile, to illuminate the darkness. Unfortunately, when average men have heard any theory for a long time, they are prone to accept it as accomplished fact. They make of it a religious dogma, and are the more emotional in their support of it if it seems to be a theory which is irksome to their enemies. Humans are always dividing into opposing camps of intellectual belief, not according to evidence, but according to emotions. To do anything to encourage this attitude is to fail in leadership.

Now, insofar as the editorial is concerned, I should like to point out these things. First, your phrase "are said to have denounced" indicates to my mind that you do not know whether the matter you are discussing is true or false, whether Moscow scientists really issued a denunciation of the Mendelian law or not. I suspect that the whole editorial is improperly based on hearsay evidence, some quip in a foreign newspaper or journal.

Secondly, chromosomes are scientific fact, established by laboratory evidence. But genes are mere theory. And the genes theory has lately been attacked by competent men in our own country, I believe. At any rate, it is merely an attempt to explain how chromosomes might transmit characteristics. The theory of genes is not to be accepted as a gospel by good Americans, even if the Reds should happen to denounce it.

A great newspaper should help its readers to cultivate a scientific attitude toward all subjects. It may be that the Russian agricultural experimenters have made progress in proving or disproving the theory of genes. The fact would be interesting.

If we have so hard a time divorcing mental attitudes from emotionalism and prejudice in the realm of biology, when will we get to a sane attack on the social and economic problems of our day?

It is 300 years since Galileo. In three centuries, using the scientific approach to the problems of his environment, man has gained complete control of the forces of nature which affect him. In the realm of social organization he is still pretty much in the Dark Ages, a fact which may yet prove to be his undoing.

As fast as possible he must be taught not to adopt creeds, even scientific creeds, but to examine evidence, seek truth, hold to theories only so long as they prove useful, and always be prepared to change his mind.

In conclusion, let me clearly state that it is not the existence or nonexistence of genes in the chromosomes which troubles me. I can wait to find out whether they exist or not. But I am concerned about prejudice and appeal to thoughtless emotionalism, even when it uses such a vehicle. My favorite newspaper has a moral obligation not to do this sort of thing.

Country Editor's Diary

MAY 14—Wilson Barnes came in today to place a 25-cent want ad to sell some slightly used household furniture. Three weeks ago Wilson's wife died following a three months' illness beginning with the birth of the first child. They had been married only 11 months. Wilson now must pay $3,000 in specialist and hospital bills out of his $30 salary.

MAY 27—Miss Nedie Mitchell came in today frothing at the mouth. She claimed the routine publication last week of the fact that she borrowed $5,000 under a deed of trust had caused her exquisite embarrassment and that she could not face any of her friends. When she finally ran down I explained that all the best people were doing the same thing nowadays and reminded her that, if she would stop to recall, I published a similar item about Purvis Whitehead the week before. Her feathers eventually returned to a horizontal position—almost.

MAY 31—Ethel Garrett, the sheriff's daughter, and Mattie Morris, whose daddy runs the furniture store, told their mothers they were spending the night with each other Monday night and went on an all night party with Bill Hollis, who travels through here selling crackers, and Jim Horton, who was dishonorably discharged from the Navy last month.

JUNE 1—The Rev. Stuart Osborne, the new Presbyterian minister, and Letty Daniels, who returned last week from the normal school, spent Tuesday morning fishing on Gum Creek.

JUNE 3—George Green, local boy who spends nine months of each year traveling to the four corners of the world, "paid up" 11 small accounts to town merchants last Saturday night. He gave each a $15 check "signed" by Oscar Green, his uncle. He pocketed the difference and left town on the 9:30 train.

JUNE 4—There's a substantial rumor that the town's three ministers are going to take legal action against the theater for conducting a lottery if it doesn't switch its "Bank Night" to some night other than Wednesday, traditional prayer meeting night here.

JUNE 7—School Principal Mack Porter spoke to me today for the first time since last fall when I ran the story of his and Johnny Martin's arrest for shooting doves out of season. Johnny still hasn't spoken and continues to walk away whenever I approach a group of which he is one.

JUNE 8—The "Four Hundred Club" now has a seventh member. She is Mrs. Evelyn Parker, wife of the new station agent. The "club" holds daily sessions beginning at 2:30 or 3 p. m. each day in one of the drug stores. One day it's Copeland's and the next it's Mitchell's. As a rule the sessions last until a few minutes before 6 because, as some of the boys say, each woman is afraid to leave for fear she will be put on the pan. They have to break up before 6 to get to the store in time to buy a can of beans, some cold cuts and lettuce and tomatoes for their husbands' suppers.

JUNE 10—Carolyn Barnes, who was demoted from her job as private secretary by the new county agent, wanted me to find out how come. I found out today but can't tell her because it was her uncle, County Commissioner Jack Bailey, who made the new agent put Widow McCormick's daughter, Alice, into the job.

JUNE 12—Preacher Beech has been right cool toward me ever since the press association meeting here two weeks ago when all the boys got tight and kept the whole east side of the town awake until after midnight.

JUNE 15—Figured up today and found I had collected $114 and three hams on subscriptions during the past two weeks.

JUNE 16—Miss Mae Lowe, president of the United Daughters of the Confederacy, nearly took my head off this morning because I made an error in a story she sent in this week. Her story related that her 89-year-old uncle addressed the U. D. C. Monday night on "Southern Battlegrounds." In rewriting the story I stated that he was a war veteran. She hasn't yet been able to understand how I could have made such an error although I spent fifteen minutes on the phone with her.

JUNE 17—Rufus Varner says he and Mace Pleasants were plug fishing in Mud Creek the other day when his plug landed in a tree about 8 feet over the water and tangled thoroughly in the branches. Mace had rowed the boat over and Rufus was standing on his tiptoes trying to retrieve his plug and line. Rufus says he was just winding up a two-minute string of his best cuss words when he heard another boat and looked around to find Preacher Beech right on them. Rufus says the preacher kept right on rowing.

JUNE 19—Jim Raynor was mighty proud of the new 10-pound baby that arrived at his house last Friday and was very anxious to have the announcement in the paper. He told Doc Mitchell to be sure to tell me about it and then he went home and wrote a note to Edie Smith, the society editor. So the announcement got in—twice.

JUNE 19—I had to do a little work today to get the full story of the ruckus the Horse Creek school district folks got into. Ed Mathias, the school superintendent, told me two of the Horse Creek school's teachers were re-elected but he said nothing about a row on the school board. When I got back to the office Slick Martin said he had just heard they had a ring-tailed meeting up there night before last.

I had to call three people before I could get the whole story. Seems that the school trustees didn't want the teachers back this year because they wouldn't listen to the trustees' instructions and kind of snooted the ladies' organization in Horse Creek. The children and all the parents wanted them back and marched, 200 strong, to demand their reinstatement. The trustees gave up, re-elected the teachers and then resigned.

Municipal Scandals

IN FRANCE, the national government has become receiver, so to speak, for the City of Marseille, a municipality so corrupt that even the French people, who prefer their politics strong and smelly, like their cheese, were scandalized by disclosures of high and low thievery, debt and degradation. The city has lost its right of self-government for the time being on the ground that this right is accompanied by certain responsibilities which were not discharged.

The French may be, as the soldiers sang, a funny race, but they have here used the direct approach and a forthright declaration of purpose to obtain an effect which, in this country, is being developed quietly, indirectly, even insidiously, for better or for worse, by means which Harold Ickes would describe as the flank attack.

The French intend that Marseille shall regain her independence as soon as she has it corrected. But the American national Government is planning to continue in the role of general supervising boss of the lesser units, States as well as cities, and the citizens, who might not have serious objections even if they did know it, seem to be unaware that this is going on.

Boss Pendergast Was City Dictator

KANSAS CITY is an example of civic failure and the infiltration of the Federal authority into municipal affairs. In Kansas City a particularly greedy and notorious old thief who had been honored by Benito Mussolini in recognition of their political and moral kinship had robbed and oppressed the town for years and, through his control of the police and all other forces of local government, had become a dictator beyond challenge from any local opposition.

In this situation the Federal Government began hacking away at his power by prosecuting his subdictators for election frauds, which were Federal offenses, and finally got Boss Pendergast himself on a charge of defrauding the United States Treasury of the income tax on money which he had stolen. He is now in prison for this, but the local charges have not been prosecuted and probably never will be because he is old and sick. This was a case in which a big city had to admit that it was unable to do its own police work and has been glad to have the Department of Justice step in and take a thug off its neck.

Jersey City, Miami Also Need Cleanup

THERE ARE REASONS to hope that Jersey City will be similarly favored as a result of the investigation of the interstate horse-betting traffic which operated from a center on the Jersey side and followed up only recently when Treasury men began to prowl through the affairs of a system which bore itself with the arrogance of the Capone rackets.

Miami also would be an interesting field of investigation, as, in fact, would every city in which rackets operate and politicians sell criminal concessions, for the income tax law gives the Federal Government an interest in graft wherever it is received. This law is the sure-shot law, and although it failed in the historic New Orleans cases involving Huey Long's subdictators, the circumstances then were delicate and special.

Together with the narcotic law and the election laws, which involve the citizens' right to vote and to a fair count of the votes, it confers a power on the Federal Government which can be used to an effect never before anticipated and the danger is that the State and local authorities will become so reliant on Federal investigation and prosecution that they will just yield up their responsibilities to Washington.

Cities Prefer To Pass Buck

IN FACT, the States and cities have been doing this in other ways for years but particularly under the New Deal. They have failed to perform their duties as States and cities toward their people, sometimes through no fault of their own but in some cases obviously because they preferred to pass the buck, and the effect of all this crying for help and defaulting has been to place them in the relation of a shaky creditor to a bank. The services which they receive from the Federal Government are in the nature of favors, not rights, and are granted as favors with political conditions which place the beneficiaries under obligations.

Thus the Federal authorities may intervene as advisers, unofficial managers or receivers of the sub-units of Government, and the tendency is to surrender responsibility and independence in return for money and other help from Washington, not openly and temporary, as in the case of Marseille, but unconsciously and forever.

Senators Propose Profit-Sharing Aids

sympathetic, the committee takes pleasure in pointing to the accompanying record proving that there has been a vast, voluntary experimentation with various types of profit sharing which demonstrates the existence of widespread social-mindedness in American business."

Asserting that profit-sharing had two major objectives, insurance f employment income, or job security, and financial security in old age, the committee recommended the adoption of a plan under which both workers and employers would contribute. A stipulation was included that the trustee should be required to disburse a portion of the fund to guarantee livable wages in periods of partial or complete unemployment.

Such a plan, the report added, would "make capitalists of the workers, completely changing their thinking and attitude toward the industrial system—an imperative national need."

The committee held that profit sharing is not "restricted to companies already making a profit," but "has been employed to carry companies out of the red and into the black by securing that measure of enthusiastic co-operation and contented efficiency which is the direct result of a belief that they will not only be treated fairly by their employers but that they have a material and predetermined interest in the results of the efforts of both workers and management."

Business Machine Obsolete

In the report of the survey conducted by the staff were these conclusions:

"The key to the business cycle is the capital-goods market, and the pace with which money flows to our plant and equipment replacements and to expansions determines whether times are good or bad.

"Today not only are we confronted with our national income 60 per cent below the amount which the President states is required to balance our budget under our present rates of taxation, but we are also faced with a business machine that is estimated as being from 40 to 60 per cent obsolete.

"All the foregoing at a time when our national debt is at the largest figure ever known, with some of our best business brains retiring from active participation in our affairs because of punitive tax measures and harassing control efforts, plus 20 to 25 per cent of our working population unemployed . . .

Advocate Experiments

It must be kept in mind that permanent employment, new home construction, establishment of new enterprises, plant expansion and consequential additions and betterments to our productive facilities can be brought about only by government making it possible for private companies to operate their businesses at fair profits, and that such companies be not handicapped by burdensome taxation, restrictive legislation and unfair competition. . . .

"Let us, therefore, experiment to a reasonable degree with incentive taxation, making sure that the funds exempted from tax collections by Congress will be used in the direct employment of labor and materials, particularly for the construction and durable-goods industries."

Among suggestions to help business were these:

Specific tax credits for increased employment, when such employers are engaged in other than capital expenditure projects.

Various Deductions Suggested

Reasonable exemption from taxation of expenditures for plant expansion, new enterprises, and improvements to existing facilities.

Exemption from capital gains tax and increase in deduction for capital losses of gains and losses realized by first purchasers of securities issued to finance new enterprises, expansions or improvements.

Carry-over of losses attendant upon operation of new enterprises or development by existing organizations of new products.

Increase in deductible allowances for depreciation and obsolescence.

Deduction for severance payment reserves.

Exemption from capital gains and income taxes of profits on bonds purchased at a discount for retirement from funded debt accounts of railroads and operating public utilities.

Wallace Credits Wheat Program With Good Price

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace yesterday credited the Federal wheat export program for maintenance of wheat prices in the United States for the last six months at 11 cents a bushel above world levels.

"The wheat export program," Wallace declared, "has proved that in the face of increased world competition and higher import barriers, this country can hold its fair share of the world trade for the producers of an important export commodity."

He added that 88,000,000 bushels have been handled through the export program, and as a result, he said, the entire crop has brought better prices than otherwise would have been possible.

O'Mahoney Opposes Merger of 2 Airlines

Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming, yesterday declared a proposed merger of Western Air Express and United Air Lines "has all the earmarks of a financial manipulation which can be of no benefit to aviation as a whole, to employes of the companies affected, or to the areas which the companies serve."

O'Mahoney, in a statement, said he intended to see that the proposal is "thoroughly studied" if it is submitted to the Civil Aeronautics Authority for approval.

20,000 Farms Plant 11,000 Miles of Trees

More than 20,000 farms will have planted 11,000 miles of windbreak tree strips to help protect crops, soils and livestock by the end of the spring planting season this year, Secretary of Agriculture Wallace reported yesterday.

Wallace expressed satisfaction at the great demand by farmers for windbreaks, reported by the Prairie States Forestry Project office at Lincoln, Nebr.

Lower Cost Revealed

SOME SENSATIONAL figures on the cost of life insurance were put into the record of the Temporary National Economic Committee last week.

Most sensational were these, on the net cost of a $1,000 straight life insurance policy over the last ten years for a man who was 35 years old in 1929 when the policies were issued.

Net cost if the insurance was bought through the ten savings banks which were selling insurance in Massachusetts in 1929, $27.37.

Net cost if bought from least expensive private insurance company, $46.01.

Net cost if bought from highest cost private company, $87.30.

These, it must be emphasized, are the net costs for the whole ten years. They are not the premium rates; but the premium rates minus what you get back in dividends and minus the cash value of your policy at the end of ten years.

Net Protection Cost Put At $2.74 A Year

IF YOU BOUGHT your $1,000 policy through the savings banks system you paid a total of $239 in premiums. You got back $75.87 in dividends. At the end of ten years your policy had cash value of $135.76—so that you got your insurance protection for $27.37, or $2.74 a year.

The Massachusetts savings bank life insurance system was set up in 1907 at the instigation of Louis D. Brandeis. Twenty-six savings banks now issue life insurance policies, while many other banks and institutions act as selling, or application agencies. Only persons residing or working in Massachusetts can take out policies. The maximum you can buy from one bank is $1,000 but you can get up to $25,000 by spreading your policies among the various banks. Seventy-five per cent of the policyholders, however, are insured for $1,000 or less.

You can arrange to have your premiums paid through your employer by deductions from your pay checks or by authorizing your bank to draw on your regular savings deposits.

Big Savings Are In Selling Costs

DESPITE LOWER costs to the buyer, the savings bank life insurance companies have kept a higher ratio of surplus to reserve—an extra measure of caution—than have the regular life insurance companies doing business in the State.

Why is the savings bank insurance so much cheaper? In the first place, the savings banks were fortunate enough to earn a little higher interest return on their invested reserves. Secondly, they had a little more favorable mortality experience than did the regular insurance companies.

The big savings, however, were in the selling costs. The savings bank insurance is on a "cafeteria" basis. Some of the banks advertise, but they do not spend money on agents and high pressure selling methods.

In 1937, for example, the total operating expense for savings bank life insurance was 7.16 per cent of the income from premiums. The ordinary life insurance companies paid out 14.13 per cent of their premium income in expenses. And the industrial life insurance companies paid out 25.32 per cent.

Low Lapse Rate In Bank System

THE SAVINGS BANK system has, also, a remarkably low lapse rate. Fewer policy holders stop paying premiums before their policies have acquired cash value. This is partly because under the savings bank system the policies acquire a cash surrender value sooner than from the regular insurance companies. This is another reflection of low selling costs. But the lower lapse rate undoubtedly is due also to the fact that people are not encouraged to buy too much insurance. They step up and ask for what they want. Sometimes they are discouraged from buying as much as they would like to have.

The regular insurance companies have contended that the Massachusetts savings bank system is subsidized by the State. Judd Dewey, the State deputy commissioner of savings bank life insurance, told the TNEC that this subsidy, through tax favoritism, amounted to only $10,000 for the whole system last year, and that he favors perfect equality in taxation.

Cafeteria System Lops Operating Costs

THIS YEAR New York authorized the sale of life insurance through savings banks and 13 banks have received licenses as issuing banks or agency banks.

The facts about the Massachusetts system, as they were told to the TNEC, pointed up other evidence that the life insurance buyer, under the regular system, pays heavily for operating costs which could be lopped off if more insurance were sold on a cafeteria basis. As one observer remarked: "We life insurance buyers seem to be running an unemployment relief agency for life insurance agents."

Movers' Association Opens Offices Here

The Independent Movers and Warehousemen's Association has opened headquarters here in Room 301, Star Building, with J. C. Church, executive secretary, in charge, it was announced today.

The association was organized after passage of the motor carriers act in 1935, in the interest of the independent long-distance mover.

The 'Polish Henlein'

By F. G. Smith, Jr.

Concerning Dr. Hans Kohnert

THE EYES of Europe are on Poland today. There is dynamite in Danzig and the Polish Corridor which may explode, almost without warning. Within Poland itself there is more than slight suspicion that the one man who may touch off this dynamite on orders from the west is a handsome, thoroughly "Aryan" 33-year-old school teacher who has served two years military service in the Polish army. His name is Dr. Hans Kohnert.

Dr. Kohnert is head of the Deutsche Vereinigung, with headquarters at Bydgoszcz in the heart of the Polish Corridor. He declares that under him are 172,000 Germans resolved to keep their "German culture" alive. Under his control are 100 German Privat-Schule, evidently erected by German money, in which German children learn of their past history and of the Treaty of Versailles. Working in consultation with him are, following him the 17,000 members of the Jungdeutsche Patrei, a strenuously National Socialist organization whose principal cry is "back to Germany." Working with him too, and in manifest contact with Berlin, are the German consul-general in Torun, the former German city of Thorn, and the two German senators, Erica Harsbach and Rudolph Wiesner. Dr. Kohnert thinks himself a really important young man.

HIS OFFICES are in a large building in he center of Bydgoszcz. When I presented my card, I was told Dr. Kohnert was "away." No one knew when he would return from his "trip." I was ushered to the waiting room. The attendant raised his hand and said, "Heil." But no "Hitler." That is forbidden.

Dr. Kohnert was not "away." I went into the office to meet a blond, sharp faced and energetic young man who politely asked me to sit down. On the wall, over my chair, were two pictures: one of Adolf Hitler, the other of Poland's President Moscicki. The blond young man, who was Dr. Kohnert in person, as I discovered afterward, insisted that the sole purpose of the Vereinigung, founded directly after the Polish-German pact of 1934 permitted Germans to band together, was to keep German customs and speech alive. The arguments put forward are very reminiscent of those we heard about a year ago from Henlein's lips: "We are citizens of the Polish state," he said, "and many of us have done our military service here. Up to recent times, we have lived on friendly terms with the Poles. All we want are certain promised rights which are now not being given us. And that is all."

These rights, guaranteed by the Treaty of Versailles and the German-Polish minorities agreement of 1937, are being willfully broken, according to Dr. Kohnert. Still following him 50 per cent of the German children are forced to go to Polish schools. It is said that 100 teachers (Wanderlehrer) whom the Vereinigung sends out to small villages and directly to German homes to teach the national tongue have been arrested, under an old law passed in Prince Metternich's time and, but recently revived. Jail sentences and fines seem to have been handed down with severity.

FURTHERMORE by two laws, the agrarian reform law of 1926 and the amended border zone law of 1937, the Germans say that they are being dispossessed of their land. When the first law went into effect, 38 per cent of the land to be divided up and parceled out belonged to Germans, 62 per cent to Poles. Under the administration of the law, 66 per cent of this German land has been split up, only 34 per cent of the Polish soil. In the reparceling process, German peasants, declares Kohnert, have received only a scant share of the spoils.

Posen and Pommerellen, almost in their entirety, fall under the second hated law. According to its provisions, no person, whether German or Pole, can buy or sell what is defined as "border property" without the permission of the government. The Germans, however, rarely obtain that necessary permission, and the land falls into the hands of Polish peasants. There are other complaints, just as frequently voiced. Ownership of guns is forbidden in certain border districts; the Germans insist that these guns are necessary for "hunting." Germans can, too, rarely obtain passports to leave the country. That is an especially sore point, for Dr. Kohnert.

According to the German view, these laws, in their administration, work as a deliberate continuation of the Polish government's Entdeutschung-Politik (policy of de-Germanizing). Once the powers-that-be decided after the war against a plebiscite in these two areas (the Germans still fervently believe that a plebiscite would have been in their favor) the Poles started their campaign. Germans were quite naturally dismissed from all service posts, from the railways, postoffices, etc. A widespread emigration back to Germany rolled under way. The number of Germans—1,100,000 before the war—dwindled to 500,000 in 1921 and to 300,000 by the last known census.

NOW FOLLOWING Dr. Kohnert, regardless of what actions the Poles take, this movement is at an end. "This is our Heimat, our real home," he said. "We have lived here on the land for years, many of us for centuries. We do not intend to leave." His family, for example, he insists, has lived near Bydgoszcz for 300 years. The estate is run now by his brother and the return is sufficient to enable Dr. Kohnert to live, he says, without "financial assistance from the outside." He visibly wishes to impress this fact on the world at large.

This, then, is the official viewpoint of Kohnert's association. The Poles do not deny the facts, but they have their reasons for those facts, and they are good reasons. They fear, even more today after the fall of Czecho-Slovakia, the establishment of a German organization which, hiding its real aims, will start by asking politely for an inch, as did Henlein, and end by shouting violently for 3 or 4 yards of concessions.

They point out—and with vigor—that the Germans are in no district in the Corridor more than 25 per cent of the population, and that even after the war they were in a majority only in certain large cities. They assert, too, that the condition of the 300,000 Poles in Germany is far more "unbearable," than that of the Germans in Poland. This will be their best defense.

And though they have allowed Kohnert freedom of organization and administration within the Corridor, they have quickly stamped out all attempts at too open and flagrant propaganda. Thus it is usual that no member of either group is permitted to wear uniforms of any nature. The use of Hitler's name is strictly forbidden. Permission for public meetings is difficult to secure, and all Dr. Kohnert's speeches are censored. Last week in Posen he was fined 50 zloty for mentioning in an address there that his speech had been cut by the censor.

THE GERMAN press in Poland, which includes 18 daily newspapers, in addition to the many magazines which are published in German and especially dedicated to Polish affairs, commends these perfectly normal measures of security in a way which makes them sound like "persecutions."

The Germans in East Prussia, even more than those in Poland, talk of the day when the Corridor problem will be "liquidated." For, as Germans, they have not forgotten that both Hindenberg and Ludendorff were born in Posen, now Poznan, and that that "sacred German soil" is now Polish soil.

They talk of the economic hardships which separation from Germany has brought—and that is perhaps true—but the Corridor is more of a blow to their pride than to their stomachs. German officers must surrender their swords to Polish railway officials when making the half-hour train trip through Polish land. The Germany of today grew out of Prussia. There her first leaders were crowned. East Prussians will never forget that, says Kohnert.

The press in Poland makes no attempt to hide the fact that Kohnert and his coworkers are all budding "Henleins." They know that the Jungdeutsche Partei, at least, is a strictly "Berlin organization." They would perhaps like to believe what Dr. Kohnert insists is the truth—that the Germans in Poland are loyal citizens and want only their rights within the state. But they recognize the double allegiance which his position demands, and they are willing to lay odds that if the order should come from Von Ribbentrop or Bohle that such and such demands be made and that the Germans should demand their "freedom," he would make them.

THE POLES know too well the quotation from the book of Alfred Rosenberg entitled, "Der Zukunftsweg einer deutscher Aussenpolitik" (The Future Path of a German Foreign Policy). In it the Nazi "philosopher" said: "If it is understood that the disappearance of the Polish state is the chief necessity for Germany, then the conclusion of an alliance between Kiev (an independent Ukranian state) and a common frontier becomes from a racial and national standpoint an indispensable object to be pursued by German foreign policy in the future." Too much has happened in the last eight months which bears out these prophetic words. The Poles are determined that it shall not end as Herr Rosenberg has planned.

4 Out of 5 Service Girls To Be Wed Into Army, Navy, Marine Corps

Virginia Lee Berle Walks Beneath Arch Of Swords Tomorrow With James Weaver, Of the Army; Betty Boschen Only Exception

By Elizabeth Henney.

WHEN THE CAPRICIOUS Cupid fired a dart in the general direction of the Army and Navy recently, it ricocheted all over the services. As a result, many young service lassies have that dreamy, June-moon look in their eyes, and go about murmuring softly to themselves, such things as—"Bridesmaids in pink or pastels—ushers in blues—arch of swords—shall I wear satin or lace . . .?"

Four out of five are following the tradition of marrying back into the service, and following their husbands round and round the world. The fifth, Miss Betty Boschen, daughter of the chief of finance, Maj. Gen. Frederick W. Boschen and Mrs. Boschen will marry Edgar Morris, jr., of Washington, and will make her home here in the new house her fiance has recently built.

The four include Miss Virginia Lee Berle, daughter of Lieut. Col. Charles Kettig Berle, U. S. Army, and Mrs. Berle; Miss Marion Nulsen, daughter of Col. Charles Kilbourne Nulsen, U. S. Army, and Mrs. Nulsen; Miss Elizabeth Walson, daughter of Col. Charles Moore Walson, U. S. Army, and Mrs. Walson, and Miss Margaret Devereux Jeschke, daughter of Lieut. Col. Richard H. Jeschke, U. S. Marine Corps, and Mrs. Jeschke. They will all five be married in Army chapels, with the Fort Myer Chapel winning over the Walter Reed Memorial Chapel by three to two.

Miss Virginia Berle Marries Tomorrow

Miss Virginia Lee Berle is the first of the group to walk under the arch of swords. Tomorrow at half after four o'clock, in the Walter Reed Memorial Chapel, she will become Mrs. James Ranier Weaver, wife of Lieut. Weaver, of the Infantry, U. S. Army. It will be a sunshine wedding, with all the attendants wearing gowns of maize yellow net.

Miss Virginia Elizabeth Barber, of New York, daughter of Lieut. Comdr. and Mrs. E. H. Barber, will be maid of honor for Miss Berle, and the bridesmaids will be Miss Martha Allison Cockrell, Miss Edna-Mae Miller, Miss Martan Weaver, sister of the bridegroom, and Miss Sarah Fleming, daughter of Col. and Mrs. W. D. Fleming, of Edgewood Arsenal, Md.

Col. J. R. N. Weaver, father of the bridegroom, will be best man, and ushers will be a number of the bridegroom's brother officers. Following the ceremony there will be a reception at Sternberg Auditorium in the Walter Reed Hospital grounds. After a motor trip honeymoon the couple will make their home at Fort Dix, N. J.

Miss Berle is a graduate of Holton Arms and attended Corcoran Art School, and Lieut. Weaver graduated from West Point in 1936.

Miss Boschen To Be June Bride

June 28 is the date chosen by Miss Betty Boschen for her marriage to Edgar Morris, jr. The ceremony will take place at 4:30 in the afternoon at the Fort Myer Chapel, with Chaplain Walter B. Zimmerman officiating. Immediately afterward there will be a reception at the Army-Navy Country Club.

Miss Tracy Axton, cousin of Miss Boschen, will be matron of honor, and bridesmaids will be Mrs. James Wimsatt, Miss Dorothy Highfield, Miss Polly Wirgman and Miss Joanne Smith. A pastel rainbow wedding was Miss Boschen's choice, and all of her attendants will be gowned in various shades of net. Allan MacGraw will be the best man, and ushers will include James Wimsatt, Ralph Housen, David Humphreys and Bradley Edelbutt.

Miss Nulsen to Marry Childhood Sweetheart

MISS MARION NULSEN will marry into the service again, but will transfer her affections from the Army side to the Navy side, when she becomes the bride of Ensign J. Duncan Elliott, jr. They both have Army backgrounds, grew up together and have been childhood sweethearts from the time Col. and Mrs. Elliott and Col. and Mrs. Nulsen were first stationed on the same post.

They will be married at the Fort Myer Chapel some time near the end of July and the reception will be at the Army-Navy Country Club. At this wedding the ushers will be Navy officers in full uniform, though the best man will be the bridegroom's father, Col. J. Duncan Elliott, of the Army.

Mrs. Charles B. Hines, of Fort Myer, will be matron of honor and the bridesmaids will be Miss Ann Page, Miss Joan Boye and Miss Betsy Wyche, of Fort Bragg, N. C. An all-white wedding this one will be, with bridal attendants in organdy. The couple will make their home in Bremerton, Wash.

Miss Walson, Lieut. Bixby To Wed in August

Miss Elizabeth Walson will rejoin the Army on August 23, when she becomes the bride of Lieut. George Willard Bixby at Walter Reed Memorial Chapel at 8 o'clock in the evening. Their reception will be at the Army-Navy Country Club and they will make their home at Fort Belvoir, in nearby Virginia. Miss Helen Wallace, daughter of Mrs. J. H. Wallace and the late Col. Wallace, will be maid of honor and the best man will be Richard Mauer. The list of ushers, fellow officers of the bridegroom, has not yet been completed.

ONCE A MARINE always a Marine and Miss Margaret Jeschke will still be in the Marine Corps when she marries Lieut. John Sherman Oldfield in August. Details have not been completed, though the wedding will be a military one and will take place in Fort Myer Chapel. The couple will live in Quantico, Va., where Lieut. Oldfield is stationed.

Miss Huntress' Engagement Is Announced

At a dinner Saturday evening at the Union League Club in Chicago, Mrs. Margery G. Huntress announced the engagement of her daughter, Miss Marion Huntress, to William Mitchell Palmer, jr., of Jackson, Mich.

Yesterday, the bride-to-be and her fiance were feted at a tea given by Mr. and Mrs. Douglas K. Huntress.

Miss Huntress, whose father is Carroll B. Huntress, of New York City, is widely known here, having been graduated from Gunston Hall School. She also attended Wildcliff Junior College in Swarthmore, Pa. Mr. Palmer attended Deerfield Academy and was graduated from Amherst in 1938.

Off for a Ride in the Bermuda Sunshine

Dr. and Mrs. Edward C. Acheson, of Washington, who are vacationing at Newstead, Paget, Bermuda, are pictured on Front street, Hamilton, soon after their arrival. Dr. Acheson is professor of finance at George Washington University. He is the son of the late Bishop Edward C. Acheson and Mrs. Acheson, of Middletown, Conn. Mrs. Acheson is the daughter of Mrs. M. Garland Murrell, of Richmond and Lynchburg, Va. Dr. Acheson's recently published book is "Murder to Hounds," considered one of the best mystery stories of the year

Delafields Hosts at Fair

Following the Columbus Memorial Day Parade at the World's Fair in New York yesterday morning, Brig. Gen. John Ross Delafield, who was grand marshall of the parade, and Mrs. Delafield entertained at luncheon in Perylon Hall. Guests were the diplomatic and consular representatives of the Pan American nations, the speakers, officials and other honored guests who had participated in the dedication of the Columbus Memorial model that day.

Ranking guests included the Dominican Minister and Senora de Pastoriza, Representative Hamilton Fish and Mrs. Fish, and Representative Matthey J. Merritt and Mrs. Merritt.

Also among the guests were Rafael de la Colina, Consular General of Mexico, and Senora de la Colina; Oscar Correia, Consul General of Brazil; Tomas Pacanins, Consul General of Peru; Pablo Suarez, Consul General of Cuba, and Senora de Suarez, and Count Girolamo de Bosdari, Vice Consul of Italy.

Col. F. A. Cortlandt Parker and Edward F. Roosevelt were also among the guests, as were Mr. and Mrs. James Lenox Banks.

Caroline O'Day At Sulgrave Club For Rest of Session

Representative Caroline O'Day has given up the house at 1509 Twenty-eighth street which she has occupied for the winter and is at the Sulgrave Club for the remainder of the Congressional session.

Her daughter, Miss Ella O'Day, who has been spending the winter and spring in Washington, has returned to her home in Rye, N. Y.

Nussbaums to Be At Home July 2

Mr. and Mrs. Warren Nussbaum, whose wedding took place on June 9 in the Memorial United Bretheran Church, will be at home after July 1. The bride formerly was Miss Margaret Bernice Spies, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Spies. Mr. Nussbaum is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Nussbaum, of Berwyn, Md. The Rev. Simpson B. Daughtery officiated at the 8 o'clock evening ceremony.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore her mother's wedding gown, fashioned of silk blonde lace over ivory satin.

Mrs. Edward R. Spies, a sister-in-law of the bride, was matron of honor. The maid of honor was Miss Mary Beavers. Robert Stuart, of Arlington, was best man. Ushers were Edward Spies, brother of the bride; Francis Murphy and Wallace Burton, cousins of the bridegroom, and Fred Causey. An informal reception followed at the home of the bride's parents.

Marta Brakaw To Be Heard

While its president, Mrs. Robert Olesen, and several other local members, as well as those of the national staff, are in Denver for the biennial convention of the American Association of University Women, the Washington branch will pursue its usual schedule, holding its weekly tea this afternoon.

Miss Marta Brakaw, a member of the club, will present a vocal recital at 4 o'clock.

Her appearance at the club will be Miss Brakaw's debut as a singer. For some years she had studied both the harp and piano, devoting her time to these and doing nothing with her voice, despite the urging of friends that she cultivated her gift in this direction. Recently she has heeded their counsel and has added singing to her accomplishments, studying with John Henry Marville. She will be accompanied tomorrow by Miss Sally West and will sing "Connais tu le pays," from "Mignon;" "In the Luxembourg Garden" (Manning), and "Stream" (Bundmere).

New appointments on the board of the local branch of the A. A. U. W. include that of Miss Mary V. Robinson to succeed Miss Bertha Nienburg as chairman of the committee on the economic and legal status of women. Miss Robinson is director of the Bureau of Public Information of the Women's Bureau in the United States Department of Labor.

Miss Mary Louise Brown, dean of women at American University, has been appointed to succeed Mrs. Parker D. Trask as chairman of the arts committee, and Mrs. George B. Roth, as chairman of hospitality, succeeding Mrs. Frank Smith.

Following the national convention the branch president, accompanied by Mrs. Richard Hogue, past president and a member of the national board, will attend the San Francisco World's Fair and then go to Ephraim, Wisc., to join Dr. Olesen and their son and daughter at their summer home. Mrs. Hogue will go to Grand Lake, Colo., where Mr. Hogue will meet her, and they will spend part of the summer fishing and hiking in the mountains.

Ila Fay Doughty Wed To Bryan Coe Here

Mr. and Mrs. James Archibald Doughty, of Altus, Okla., announce the marriage of their daughter, Miss Ila Fay Doughty, to Bryan Coe, on Saturday. The Rev. John W. Rustin, of the Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, officiated.

Following a short trip through New England and Canada, Mr. and Mrs. Coe will be at home at 4516 Yuma street northwest after July 8. Mr. Coe is an examiner at the United States Patent Office.

Alexander Castros Take An Apartment Here

Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Francisco Castro, who were married last week, have taken an apartment in the Meridian Park Apartments, at 2445 Fifteenth street.

Mr. Castro is the son of Hector David Castro, Minister of El Salvador, and Senora de Castro. Mrs. Castro is the former Miss Fanchon Aldrich, niece of Representative and Mrs. Jesse P. Wolcott, of Port Huron, Mich.

Sangstads Hold Party for Pen Women

200 Members of D. C. Branch Attend Garden Fete

Mr. and Mrs. Olaf Saugstad were hosts yesterday at a garden party for members of the D. C. branch of the National League of American Pen Women. Nearly 200 members of the league and their families attended the affair at the Saugstads' country home on the Potomac 5 miles beyond Alexandria.

Receiving with the hostess were Mrs. Helen Orr Watson, president of the local branch; Mrs. Liela Pier King and Mrs. Maidy Campbell, vice presidents. Two of the founders of the national league and daughters of two others were guests of honor. The founders were Miss Anna Patten and Mrs. Emma Triepel, and the daughters of founders, Mrs. A. H. Buell, daughter of Mrs. Virginia Frye, and Mrs. Paul Scharff, daughter of Mrs. Marion Longfellow.

Tables, where the "makings" of sandwiches were provided with a variety of other delicacies and cold beverages, were arranged on the porch, which is built around the trunk of a large, spreading tree. This is but one of the many novel features of the house and grounds which reflect the genius of the artist owners. There are pools in the garden, one spanned by a rustic bridge, the Norse window in the house and the studios of both Mr. and Mrs. Saugstad were among other points of interest to the guests.

Mrs. Claudia Rice Scott, retiring hospitality chairman for the District branch of the league, was in charge of arrangements in the absence of Mrs. Tomas Cajigas, the new chairman. Mrs. Cajigas, who is also hospitality chairman for the national league, has gone to San Francisco to attend the national board meeting in session there this week. Mrs. Audrey Wurdemann Auslander, national president; Miss Marguerite Merigold, State president for the District, and Mrs. Mabel Pittle, executive secretary at the national headquarters, are others who have gone from here.

There was a brief program yesterday with short talks by Mrs. Theodore Tiller, first president of the District branch; Mrs. J. Harry Cunningham, national vice president; Mrs. Blanche Ferguson, president of the Baltimore branch, and Mrs. Heber Votaw, president of the Chevy Chase branch. The music was by Sophocles Papas, eminent guitarist, teacher and composer.

Mrs. Warring Gives Luncheon for Dorothy Bartlett

Honoring Miss Dorothy Riggs Bartlett, whose wedding to George F. Viault will take place June 29, Mrs. Baden Waring entertained at luncheon on Saturday at Pierre's.

Guests included Mrs. Ralph Bing, Mrs. Rowland Lyon, Mrs. Lutz Matthews, Mrs. Leonard H. Mitchell, Miss Mary Phelan, Mrs. Lemuel Banks, Miss Katherine Berrall, Mrs. Charles G. Shoemaker, jr., Miss Mary K. Lutz, Mrs. Helen C. Baker and Mrs. Lucy B. Waters.

Anne Butler Wed To Bernard Dudley

Of interest in Washington was the wedding on Saturday in Norfolk, of Miss Anne Elizabeth Butler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Butler, of Norfolk, and Bernard Francis Dudley, of Springfield, Vt., son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Howard Dudley, of Hanover, N. H. The ceremony took place at 8 p. m. at the Christ and St. Luke's Church with the Rev. W. Taylor Willis officiating, assisted by the Rev. Robert H. Gamble.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a Lelong model of duchess satin, embroidered in seed pearls. Her veil fell from a Mary Stuart tiara and she carried a shower bouquet of gardenias and lilies of the valley.

Mrs. Joseph E. Casey, of Lancaster, Mass., and Washington, was the matron of honor and the maid of honor was Miss Harriette Spencer Vaden, of Richmond, Va.

Herman Andrew Dudley, of Chicago, was his brother's best man and the ushers were Robert Whittier Dudley, of Washington, another brother of the bridegroom; Walter Aubrey Page and Robert McCormick Wainwright, of Norfolk, and Representative Joseph E. Casey, of Lancaster, Mass., and Washington.

Columnists' Ball Is Tomorrow

Heywood Broun, Alice Hughes, Bob Considine and Leonard Hall are among the out-of-town columnists who have accepted invitations to he honor guests at the Columnists' Ball, the Newspaper Women's Club annual benefit, which will be given at the Shoreham Terrace tomorrow night.

Other guests of honor at the event will be Constantine Brown, Ernest K. Lindley, Harlan Miller, Barnet Nover, Shirley Povich, John O'Donnell, Doris Fleeson, G. Gould Lincoln, Beth Blaine, Frederic William Wile, Evalyn Walsh McLean, the Poe Sisters, Will P. Kennedy, Mary Haworth, James Waldo Fawcett, Beatrice Fairfax, Charles G. Ross, Francis Stan, Ray Tucker, Don Alba, Nancy Archibald, Peter Carter, Igor Cassini and Robert Crawford.

The Soviet Ambassador and Mme. Oumansky have reserved a table, as have Mrs. Felix Morley, Mrs. Robert Patterson, Mrs. Abner Drury, Mrs. Eleanor Patterson, Miss Elinor Ryan, Hampson Gary, and many others. Mrs. McLean, one of the honor guests, and Mrs. Rudolph Max Kauffmann have reserved tables for young people.

Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., wife of the Secretary of the Treasury, is honorary chairman for the party and Miss Helene Livingston Kravatz is chairman, assisted by Mrs. Eleanor Patterson, who is chairman of patronesses. Mrs. Robert Whitney is in charge of pages and Miss Margaret Germond has charge of reservations. In case of inclement weather the ball will take place in the Shoreham Blue Room.

The proceeds from this annual ball are used to maintain the club's bed in Children's Hospital and for the increasing of the club's Fellowship Fund.

The Prochniks Fete Mr. and Mrs. Heckscher

Mr. and Mrs. Gustave A. Heckscher, of Philadelphia, who are spending several days at the Shoreham Hotel, were feted at dinner on Saturday evening at the Chevy Chase Club, when their host and hostess were the former Austrian Minister and Mme. Prochnik.

Mr. and Mrs. Heckscher came to Washington to attend the wedding of Miss Mary Tyler McCormack and William Nelson Wilbur on Saturday afternoon. Their daughter, Mrs. Grosvenor Chapman, of New York, was one of the bridal attendants.

Miss Anne Johnson Bride In Ceremony at Fort Myer

Daughter of Remount Service Chief Wed To Lieut. Parker, Engineer Corps, of Fort Belvoir, With Military Rites

Now on their wedding trip, Lieut. and Mrs. John Richards Parker, who were married Saturday at the Fort Myer Chapel with a military ceremony, including the traditional arch of swords, will make their home at Fort Belvoir, where Lieut. Parker is stationed. The Rev. John Kromer, of the Chapel of the Holy Comforter, officiated.

The bride is the former Miss Anne Johnson, daughter of Col. Thomas J. Johnson, chief of the Remount Service, and Mrs. Johnson, of Washington. Lieut. Parker is the son of Mrs. Sam Parker, of Fort Belvoir.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of white marquisette cut on simple lines, with a heart-shaped neckline and long sleeves puffed at the shoulder. Her long veil formed a train and she carried a shower bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley.

Miss Susanna Lambert, of Henderson, Ky., was maid of honor and wore a gown of blue marquisette cut to match the bridal gown. She wore a blue hat with long streamers and carried an arm bouquet of spring flowers.

Juliet Shouse, of Lexington, Ky., was junior bridesmaid and also was gowned in blue marquisette. She carried a smaller version of the maid of honor's bouquet.

Edward M. Parker, of Fort Belvoir, was best man for his brother, and the ushers were Lieuts. David B. Parker, Nathaniel M. Martin, George Kumpe and George White, all of Fort Belvoir, and all of them officers of the Corps of Engineers, as is the bridegroom. The blue full dress uniform was worn by all the officers.

Immediately following the ceremony there was a reception at the Officers Club at Fort Humphreys, D. C. When the couple left for the wedding journey, the bride was wearing a white suit with lace blouse, matching turban and accessories.

Wheatleys Plan Delaware House

The Rev. Melvin E. Wheatley, jr., and Mrs. Wheatley, whose wedding took place in Washington Thursday, will make their home in Lincoln, Del., where he is pastor of the Lincoln Methodist Church.

The former Miss Lucile Elizabeth Maris, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul V. Maris, of Lyon Village, and Mr. Wheatley, son of the Rev. and Mrs. M. E. Wheatley, of Elkton, Md., were married in the Metropolitan Memorial Methodist Church. The bridegroom's father officiated at the 4 o'clock ceremony, assisted by the Rev. William A. Keese, pastor of the church.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was gowned in white satin, fashioned on princess lines with a long train. Her veil of tulle was caught to her hair with cluster of orange blossoms and she carried a shower bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley.

Miss Pauline Maris, sister of the bride, was the maid of honor, and wore a gown of pink net, fashioned in bouffant style. A tiara of garden flowers held a short tulle veil to her hair and she carried and arm bouquet of matching flowers.

Bridesmaids were Miss Drusilla Gottshall, of Chevy Chase; Miss Katherine Cunningham, of Baltimore; Mrs. Alden T. Smith, of Gladstone, N. J., and Mrs. Andrew G. Wilson. Miss Gottshall and Mrs. Smith were gowned in blue net and Mrs. Wilson and Miss Cunningham wore yellow net. All carried yellow roses and delphinium.

The Rev. Edward Potter, of Allersley, Md., was best man, and the ushers were the Rev. Alden T. Smith, Andrew G. Wilson, of Wilmington, Del.; S. Ralph Andrews, and the Rev. Robert Parker, of Cumberland, Md. Following the ceremony there was a reception at the home of the bride's parents.

Hardesters Are On Bridal Trip

Mr. and Mrs. James Albert Hardester, jr., who are now on a honeymoon trip in the North, will make their home in Falls Church. The former Miss Rebekah Lee Stoutenburgh, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Seymour J. Stoutenburgh, of Falls Church, and Mr. Hardester, son of Mr. and Mrs. James A. Hardester, of Arlington, were married Saturday at the home of the bride's parents. The Rev. P. Scouthen, of St. James' Church in Falls Church, officiated at the 4 o'clock afternoon ceremony.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of white silk alencon lace over satin with hat and accessories to match and carried a shower bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley.

Miss Ada Ruffin, of Chester, Va., was the maid of honor and was gowned in pink French organdie over pink satin and wore a hat of lace with touches of cornflower blue. She carried a bouquet of pink roses and cornflowers.

Robert E. Pugh was the best man and the ushers were John B. Stoutenburgh and J. Neil Stoutenburgh. There was a reception at the bride's home immediately following the ceremony.

Homeopaths Plan Banquet

The Alumni Association of the National Homeopathic Hospital will give a banquet this evening at 8 o'clock at the Raleigh Hotel with Dr. Gregg C. Birdsall, of the hospital staff, and Mrs. Orta Winter, of the alumni association, as speakers. Among the guests will be Fred McKee, president of the board of trustees, and Mrs. Clarence Dodge, president of the women's board. A dance will follow the banquet.

Your Figure Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain.

Modern eBauty Standards Are Wrong, Unhealthy

"THREE HUNDRED artists couldn't be wrong," it was said blithely, as they proceeded to select New York's most perfect model. But they were! They chose a 17-year-old girl, 5 feet 7½ inches tall, weighing 144 pounds!

Evidently the doctors and artists do not see eye to eye. The model selected is a lovely youngster, but so underweight for her height that any doctor would order a gaining diet. According to an interview at the time, she said:

"Food doesn't bother me—I eat when I feel like it."

Can Be Serious

Well, she is obviously not getting enough food, and at the age of 17 this can be very serious.

Of course, height of 5 feet 7½ inches may mean with high heels, which would make the model about 5 feet 5 inches, but, even so, a weight of 114 pounds is far too little. The least she should weigh is 120 pounds. When one is so close to the borderline between underweight and normal, six additional pounds can make a great deal of difference.

Someone is always being selected for Miss Something, and this little incident would not be worth mentioning if it did not fit in so closely with the Nation-wide trend to glorify underweights. The other day I was appalled to read an advertisement for a model between 20 and 25 years old, who must be 5 feet 8 inches tall and weigh not more than 114 pounds!

The sad part of it is that all girls try to emulate this fashion-plate type, and it is all wrong—this type is the least healthy of any! She fatigues most easily, has very poor muscle tone and is most susceptible to tuberculosis. The fact that slight progress has been made in decreasing the number of cases of tuberculosis in this group may well be due to the fact that we popularize underweight.

Good Musculature Essential

These tall, thin girls are likely to neglect exercise entirely—they are so thin they think they do not need it—but they are the ones who need it most. Well-toned muscles are their best chance for good health, for with well-toned muscles go a normal appetite and a more stable nervous system. In addition, a good musculature is absolutely essential to this type to hold the internal organs in place. It is the tall, thin girl, lacking in muscle tone, who is prone to have ptosis, or "dropped stomach," and that can prevent her from leading a healthy, normal life.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Sick of Parental Pampering, Girl Dreams of Working Her Way to San Francisco Fair; Is It Advisable?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am 19 years old and a graduate of a Southern junior college. I intend to continue my education this fall at one of the nearby universities. I am nice looking, well groomed, get along well with people, adapt quickly to new situations and love travel, novelty and adventure. I have a speaking knowledge of two foreign languages, I can type, and have a somewhat faded knowledge of shorthand and bookkeeping . . .

I want more than anything else to see one of the fairs, this summer; preferably the one in San Francisco. Were it a question of money alone, my parents would not object, for we are quite well off, financially, and usually I have had everything I wanted. But they persist in considering me a child . . . My mother says that were I to be thrust upon my own, tomorrow, I would be utterly helpless, unable to hold even the simplest job. Talk of this kind, day after day, is undermining my confidence and faith in myself. She refuses to let me take a job as stenographer or salesperson here in town (which might prove her assertions false) because, so she says, it would "harm our social position."

We have servants to take care of the house, so I have no outlet in that direction, and my mother frowns on my going out with the few classmates who live in this part of the country. Do you think I could make good on my own if I were to take some of my own money (about $40, I think I have) and leave home and take a bus or a share-expenses trip to California, sending my parents word along the way that I was safe?

Do you think I could get a job, on my own, with my knowledge of typing, shorthand and languages? Just for the summer, of course; and then return to school in the fall. I am so bored and nagged around here, and feel so helpless and useless, that I am really desperate. I would very much appreciate your advice.

DISCONTENTED.

The Test of Character

DEAR DISCONTENTED: It will be time enough to try your wings in the business world when you have finished your education. In the meantime, use your vacation periods of enforced inactivity as exercises in patience—an attribute of character which is indispensable to successful, sustained achievement. Your notion of setting forth for California with $40 in your purse is a hare-brain scheme; an extremely fanciful project which sounds as if it might have been borrowed, in toto, from a cinema, fairy tale, or from the plot of a "slick" magazine story.

If you were to embark on this Mother Goose type of adventure, you probably would wind up penniless, helpless, friendless and in tears, just about as far from home as the $40 had taken you. You probably would have to be fetched back home, at your parents' expense, in a state of humiliation which you would not be able to live down, so long as circumstances compelled you to subsist on parental bounty.

Recently I had occasion to read, in condensed form, Walter Pitkin's latest "success" book, entitled, "Making Good Before Forty." Starkly realistic in his social outlook, the author emphasizes, time and again, the inestimable value of step-by-step advance planning, when new projects are to be undertaken. He emphasizes, too, the importance of turning one's leisure to account, through developing proficiency in a wide variety of avocational pursuits. His whole volume is a stern exhortation against "going off at a tangent," when trying to find the suitable and profitable market for one's talents.

In Mr. Pitkin's opinion, the era has passed in which youth could better himself and improve his opportunities by changing his environment, willy-nilly. He advises youth to investigate and utilize the opportunities in the adjacent block, or the block beyond that. He advises working the ground around home base, since, wherever one turns today, the aspirants for jobs far outnumber the jobs to be had. He holds that the key to success is to be found in one's own imagination, initiative, aptitude, adaptability and industry. In order to "make good," youth must effect some realistic reconciliation between what he would like to do, what he can do, and what waits to be done.

If you find yourself at exasperatingly loose ends on vacation, fretfully at odds with your family, may it not be because you have not yet adequately developed your powers of adaptability? Instead of looking for appeasement outside yourself, or beyond the horizon, why not harness your restless energies by putting them to work at avocational pursuits within the home? For instance, why not refresh your "somewhat faded knowledge of shorthand and bookkeeping," by reviewing these subjects? Why not dig into a third foreign language? Why not do some housework, cooking, sewing and gardening just for the fun of it, or for its disciplinary or educational value? So long as you cannot adjust yourself, for three brief months, to conditions at home, your bold assumption that you are capable of adapting to "new situations" of the painfully unvarnished tye which abound in the business world is rather without foundation.

I do not hold with your mother's overly possessive, hen-with-one-chick argument that you could never scratch successfully for yourself outside the suffocating shelter of her wing. But I do urge you to contain yourself in patience until you have progressed beyond the pin-feather stage of social and emotional development, before sailing proudly forth from the family nest in defiance of maternal clucking. The test of your character, the proof of your social competence, will be found in the measure of your ability to turn even this trying situation to personal profit. If you let it lick you into a feeling of utter frustration, well—I wonder if you would come off any better in a first-hand encounter with the world outside?

M. H.

Youthful, Dark Print Dress, Favorite World's Fair Costume

Copyright by Amos Parrish.

Here is the way the typical American woman dresses for the New York World's Fair, as the fashion count made at the fair by the Amos Parrish Fashion organization in New York City shows. Her hat is white, and so are her accessories. Her dress is a one-piece, short-sleeved affair, in a blue print. Her shoes are oxfords. And if there's a hint of coolness in the air; she was a jacket or lightweight box coat

Fashion Survey Shows Typical Outfit Is Simple and Cool; Has White Accessories

By Amos Parrish.

New York, June 18.—Young-looking, simple, cool, comfortable clothes—there you have what women are wearing at the New York World's Fair. This is shown by counts of thousands of them made by members of the Amos Parrish Fashion organization. And what these fair-going women wear is what all America is wearing right now.

Most popular hot weather costume of all—a one-piece, short-sleeved, blue print dress, worn with a white hat and white accessories. This typical woman wears a jacket or lightweight box coat whenever it's cool enough to wear a wrap.

Short Skirts Lead

Seven highspots of the count show:

Women like to look young. Their skirts are very short. seventy-six per cent are wearing skirts at upper calf (15-17 inches from the ground), and 10 per cent wear them just below the knee (18-19 inches from the ground). That's the shortest—and most comfortable—since 1927.

They like white accessories and white hats—fresh, clean, cool. Ninety-eight per cent of gloves worn are white. Forty-two per cent of hats are white. Thirty-eight per cent of shoes are white. Thirty-four per cent of handbags are white.

Print dresses are worn by thousands and thousands of the women at the fair—in pretty, casual types rather than dressy or ornate ones.

Short Sleeves Worn

Women this summer insist on keeping cool. Ninety-six per cent at the fair wear dresses with sleeves above the elbow.

Or all the colors, blues lead—but thousands wear cool white and pastels.

More of them wear medium beige hosiery than any other shade.

Comfort is the rule in shoes. Fifty-eight per cent wear oxfords. Twenty-nine per cent of the shoes have no toes.

So World's Fair or anywhere else in our fair U. S. A., it's decidedly the fashion to look young, look pretty, look and be comfortable.

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay

Queen for a Day

Every man you meet is singing the praises of the Queen. So sweet! So simple! So natural! No paint, powder, lipstick, red finger nails! No brittle sophistication! No hard cleverness!

Well, maybe you have been getting a little hardboiled lately . . . Maybe you've been trying too hard to be modern and smart . . . And if it should be true that the Queen has started a new style in femininity, you certainly want to get in on the bandwagon early. Yes, you'll start right in now, at once—being the Queen Elizabeth type!

You had meant to wear your black chiffon and your white turban downtown, but you decide instead on your flowered print and your leghorn hat. No telling what masculine admirers of the Queen's you might run into! You put on your 3-strand pearl necklace—the Queen, they say, never wears less than three strands—your pearl bracelet, your pearl earrings, and you pin a cluster of cornflowers at your belt.

Taking a final look in the mirror, you almost weaken in your resolve to go with your face au naturel. If you could only look pale instead of sallow . . . And anyway the Queen must put a little talcum power on her nose . . . Still, they say not . . . Oh, well, you'll go just as you are—simple, genuine, wholesome—the way men like women to look.

You sally forth leisurely wearing a gracious smile. A bus has stopped at your corner. You start to run—wait! That will never do! Imagine a Queen running for a bus!

The bus departs. You wait interminably. A crowd gathers. Another bus finally comes. You proceed majestically and leisurely toward the entrance. The men do not realize you are a Queen. They push in ahead. You stand most of the way downtown.

Your slow majestic movements through the shopping district—coupled with your gracious smile—makes you the prey of every panhandler, every beggar, every small boy selling shoestrings, every sidewalk protographer. Deprived of your customary agility, you cannot dodge long-winded acquaintances who halt you on every corner. "How are you feeling?" they inquire, looking solicitously at your drab face.

The luncheon crowds, not recognizing you as a Queen, elbow you out of all your favorite eating places. You are wandering the streets, your queenly shoulders beginning to sag, when you see approaching— who of all people but your old friend Rupert McMush! One of the very fellows loudest in praise of the wholesome sweetness of the Queen!

Rupert greets you warmly. "How are you standing the heat?" he asks, looking at you curiously. You can almost see the shine on your nose. But Rupert is off on another line. He is so glad he met you. He has just had a big idea. He wants to tell you all about it . . .

At the smart cafe to which you repair, Rupert's eyes repeatedly follow the smartly dressed sophisticates with bright red claws who pass your table. You sense their disdainful glances as they appraise you. Well surely the men in the place will approve your modest beauty. You glance around. No one is looking your way.

Rupert talks on and on. You listen sweetly. Ordinarily you would be interrupting, contradicting, suggesting, advising. But no—you are a gracious Queen. On your last smiling "Yes?" Rupert stops and stares at you abruptly. "Say, what on earth is the matter with you today?" he asks abruptly. "Don't you feel well?"

Later you run on to Ann Trotter. She is wearing her new black jersey and a crazy little hat on one side of her head. She looks you over critically. "When are you going away?" she asks kindly.

"Listen Ann," you exclaim, "didn't you see the Queen—real close—at the garden party?"

"I most certainly did and——"

"Wait—tell me one thing! Did she have any powder?"

"She most certainly did and——"

"That's all I want to know," you interrupt, reaching for your compact.

Budget Hint

In planning a room, if you must skimp, do it on your floor covering, selecting a rug that is neutral and with little or no design; you can also skimp on the bulk of the furniture. Splurge on one fine big eye-compelling piece of furniture that's a real treasure. Be extravagant on lamps and accessories, and for curtains use an inexpensive fabric but get lots of it. And have beautiful linens with individual monograms.

Seal to Urge Business Tax Year More

Citizens Advisory Committee to Get Proposal, Including Income Levy, Today

A year's renewal of the local business privilege and intangible property taxes, plus an income tax at a very low rate with the exemptions of the Federal law, will be recommended today by Corporation Counsel Seal, as a temporary answer to the District's muddled tax problems.

Seal's proposals will be made to the Commissioners' Citizens Advisory Committee, meeting in District Auditor Daniel J. Donovan's office at 3 p. m. today. The committee has been asked by Senator King (Democrat), of Utah, chairman of the Senate District Committee, to draft a new local income tax bill as a basis of consideration in hearings to be held later this week.

Experimental in Purpose

The purpose of adding the low income levy to existing taxes is largely experimental, according to Seal. It would serve, he said, to give Congress and the District government a basis of estimate on the possible yield of a permanent income tax law. It would test also legal aspects, such as who would be subject to the levy; a problem involved in the fact that many Maryland and Virginia residents earn their living here, while large numbers of Government employes maintain legal residence in other States and pay taxes there.

The rates which Seal is expected to propose would begin at about one-half of 1 per cent and would not rise above 4 per cent. Exemptions would be $1,000 for a single person, $2,500 for a married couple and $400 for each dependent.

Based on Federal Scale

Donovan, the committee chairman, will present estimates on the possible yield of the income tax measure that passed the House last week, the rates of which run from 2 to 7 per cent. His estimates, however, will be based on the inclusion of the Federal income tax law exemptions, which Seal is recommending, but which were not written into the House bill.

At the same time Jo V. Morgan, of Board of Tax Appeals, will submit to the Advisory Committee other possible rates.

Tomorrow the Senate District Committee will hold a special meeting to consider the local tax situation, before announcement of public hearings.

That the result of the Senate committee's deliberation will be a far different bill from that which passed the House is virtually assured. Publicly expressed opposition to the current tax proposals by nearly a majority of the members makes it certain that if any income tax law is passed this session it will be far less drastic than the House measure.

The Senate opposition is reinforced by views of many members and the Citizens Advisory Committee itself that it is too late in the session to draft and enact a carefully considered law.

Keystone Club To Fete District, Federal Officials

District and Federal officials will be guests of the Keystone Automobile Club at its meeting tomorrow at the home of Mark Lansburgh, it was announced yesterday.

Among those invited are Representative Jack Nichols, of Oklahoma, chairman of the House District Tax Sub-committee; Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, Commissioner David McCoach, Jr., Director of Vehicles and Traffic William A. Van Duzer, Assistant Traffic Director M. O. Eldridge, Director of Highways H. C. Whitehurst, Superintendent of Police Ernest W. Brown and Inspector W. E. Holmes.

Capitol Cartooned In New Magazine

Washington's newsstands yesterday displayed a new home-grown product when "Capitol Cartoons," a magazine of huumorous drawings of local scenes and personages, made its first appearance.

Product of the GO Publishing Co., the new periodical will appear "every month or two or thereabouts," according to its editor, Jay Randolph. All cartoonists presented are local.

Man Bites Policeman; Goes to Hospital

Charles Ashton, 25, colored, of 1367 Morris road southeast, didn't want to get into an Eleventh Precinct station cell yesterday evening, according to police, so he landed in Gallinger Hospital instead.

Private George E. Chappelle reported that Ashton, arrested at 2439 Nichols avenue southeast for being disorderly, bit the policeman's right thumb. Chappelle said he struck Ashton in the face to free his thumb. Ashton was taken to Gallinger Hospital and treated for a broken nose and bruised eye. He was charged with being drunk and disorderly and with assault.

D. C. Milk Held Safe-Guarded By U. S. Code

Would Still Require Inspection of Nearby Sources, Official Says

The Public Health Service milk ordinance, recommended Saturday by the Bates sub-committee for adoption in Washington to replace present District Health Department milk ratings, would still entail Health Department inspection of dairies in the local milkshed, but would guarantee standard quality milk from other areas, Health Service officials explained yesterday.

According to A. W. Fuchs, of the Public Health Service, the national organization does not inspect milk coming under its code, but leaves the task to local health officers. The ordinance merely sets up certain standards for Grade A, B and C milk, with each community deciding for itself which grade may be sold. Some 2,100 localities operate under the code.

Were the code adopted here, as provided by amendments to the Schulte bill to come up before the full House District Committee today, either only Grade A milk would be permitted here, as at present, or other grades could be allowed, at Congress' discretion.

Declining to enter into a detailed comparison between the Public Health Service requirements for Grade A and local standards, Fuchs said, nevertheless, that the ordinance's requirements for Grade A pasteurized provided milk "just as safe and just as palatable as milk can be," and the Grade A raw was "just as safe as raw milk can be made."

Health Officer George C. Ruhland, who has opposed the milk ordinance substitution, yesterday did not deny the safe quality of milk so standardized, but pointed out that inspection of milk in other communities, even those which had adopted the ordinance, might be lax and haphazard. He said that he believed milk brought in from any distance would be libable to have a high bacteria count.

He also implied that if the law permitted shipment here of milk from other areas it would be either of lower quality—Class B or C—or if it were Class A, it would cost as much to produce and sell as that of local dairies.

This was denied yesterday by Representative Shafer (Republican), of Michigan, who declared that better milk and cream could be shipped here than is sold in Washington at present, and that it could be sold at a cheaper price.

Fuchs also insisted that if Washington were only opened to milk from so-called "90 per cent areas"—where the milk is periodically checked by the Public Health Service and 90 per cent of it is found to conform to sanitary requirements—local consumers could be assured of perfectly safe milk.

Dr. Ruhland said that if milk were permitted to be brought in from other areas under the health service ordinance, he would attempt to take "spot checks" of it to see that no inferior grades were being shipped.

Stressing the fact that he had not seen the proposed legislation and could not comment on it, Ruhland added only that if he did find milk of higher bacteria count coming in and barred it, "we will promptly be accused of trying to discriminate in favor of local producers."

Sept. 11 to Be D. C. Day at Fair

September 11 will be District of Columbia Day at the New York World's Fair, it was announced yesterday.

Plans call for a mass movement of District residents to the Fair, reenforced by Maryland and Virginia citizens who work in Washington and New Yorkers who formerly lived here.

Commissioners Hazen and McCoach are honorary chairmen for the District Day. Full committee assignments will be announced this week.

Franklin J. Frea Rites Tomorrow

Funeral services for Franklin J. Frea, 61, president of the Frea Printing Co., who died Saturday at his residence, 1116 Seminary road Montgomery Hills, Md., will be held at 11 a. m., tomorrow at the Pumphrey funeral home. Burial will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

A native of Pottsville, Pa., Mr. Frea came to Washington many years ago. He established his printing firm, which has offices at 1326 I street northwest, in 1908.

Laws Urges More Church Discipline

Justice Admonishes Methodists Not to Forsake God in Worldly Prosperity

Justice Bolitha J. Laws stood in the pulpit of his home church yesterday morning and admonished hundreds of his fellow-parishioners not to forsake God in the attainment of worldly prosperity.

Teacher of the A. B. Pugh Men's Bible Class, members of the board of stewards and recent recipient of the federation of churches' annual laymen's award, he spoke at Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church at exercises marking the seventieth anniversary of its founding and the twentieth anniversary of the occupancy of the present structure at Ninth street and Massachusetts avenue northwest.

Urges Church Discipline

"When thou hast eaten and art full, then thou shalt bless the Lord thy God for the good land which he hath given thee," he quoted from Deuteronomy, viii:10, as the text for his message at the service, which also commemorated Laymen's Day. Arthur E. Martin, chairman of the board of stewards and chairman of the building committee, presided.

The church has a great responsibility, Judge Laws pointed out, in holding the membership of those "former pillars of the church who have been swept away by a certain degree of social or financial success."

"I think sometimes the church makes a tremendous mistake in not exacting enough of its members," he said, urging stronger discipline and criticizing ecclesiastical liberalism which allows the strings to get too loose."

Membership Is 3,000

Referring to the attitude of some non-churchmen toward the church, he recalled that in his campaign for presidency of the local bar association, several people warned him that the publicizing of the fact that he taught a Bible class would defeat him for the position. He was elected.

Justice Laws was introduced by Dr. John W. Rustin, under whose leadership Mount Vernon Place has become the largest Methodist Church in the city, with a membership of more than 3,000, an increase of 900 since his arrival three years ago. Dr. Rustin spoke last night on "Why I Believe in the Church."

The present structure was begun in 1917, and finished in 1919. Plans are now completed for a $100,000 educational unit nearby.

Rep. Thomas Raps New Deal for 'Name-Calling'

Representative Thomas (Republican), of New Jersey, last night accused the New Deal of "undermining the moral and social security of almost half our population" through name-calling and phrase-coining.

Declaring individuals in the Federal Government have fostered class propaganda and "the modern witchcraft of class hatred," Thomas, a member of the Dies' committee investigating un-American activities, referred to such New Deal phrases as "tories, copperheads, money changers, economic royalists, bourbons, princes of privilege, feudal families and back-stabbers."

"Never before in the history of the United States," he said, "has a Federal Administration used its strong power to character-assissinate its own people, nor have we ever had an Administration which has inevitably gone out of its way to breed class strife."

Unidentified Man Found Dead in Lot

Two passersby, yesterday discovered the body of an unidentified man in the bushes of a lot at A and Nineteenth streets southeast. Between 45 and 50 years of age and poorly dressed, the man was believed to have been dead for 24 hours by Casualty Hospital ambulance doctors. There were no marks of violence on the body.

Lone clews to his identity were two keys, one with the initials "M. Z." and the other with "Z."

Capital News In Brief

Bandit Robs Woo Hing

An alert German police watchdog may prove the undoing of a bandit who robbed a District merchant last night and fled after firing wildly across the counter at him.

Woo Hing told police the man entered the store at 467 Florida avenue northwest, brandishing an automatic pistol. After firing a shot into the wall behind the merchant, he snatched $16 from the cash register and fled through the back door.

As the man dashed across the back yard, Woo said he heard considerable barking from the dog. Working on the theory that where there are barks there may be bites, police last night were checking hospitals for teeth-marked casualties.

Sound Sleep Costs $47

The cool weather brought sound sleep to many in the District Saturday night, but two men woke up yesterday morning to regret it.

James J. Crow, of 1322 Rhode Island avenue northwest, found his trousers, carefully hung by the bed the night before, were gone; with them $34 in bills and his driving permit. The thief had also his wife's gold wristwatch. Exploration revealed the missing trousers—pockets empty—in the bathroom two floors above.

Alfred Evans, colored, of 2715 Eleventh street northwest, reported his trousers pockets rifled of $13 in bills, his social security card and other papers while he slept.

Fireworks Set Off

Unable longer to bear waiting for July 4, boys throughout the District yesterday frightened mothers and worried neighbors by setting off early firecrackers.

Police squad cars answered calls at Eighteenth and Kalorama road northwest, the 1300 block of Potomac avenue southeast, 200 block of E street northwest, and the 1300 block of W street northwest. There were no injuries and no arrests.

Pastor's Son Preaches

One of the proudest Father's Day celebrants was the Rev. Walter M. Michael, pastor of Eldebrooke Methodist Church, River road and Wisconsin avenue northwest, whose son occupied the pulpit at evening services there.

Have Courage, Wilson Classes Are Urged

'Oblivion Is Calling Easygoing,' Dean Tells Two Groups

Graduating students of Wilson Teachers College and Woodrow Wilson High School were urged to "have the courage to weave their ideals into those of Christ" by the Very Rev. Noble C. Powell, D. D., dean of the Washington Cathedral, in baccalaureate services there yesterday.

Warning that "oblivion is calling to the easygoing," Dean Powell challenged the graduates to courage and perseverance in making the most of the physical strength, knowledge, friendships and ideals acquired in school and college.

Dean Powell compared the "rich young ruler" of the Bible who refused Christ's offer of immortality if he would give up all his possessions, to moderns who "lack the vision and courage to translate" their natural and acquired gifts into "higher qualities."

The graduates had the alternative of either reaching immortality through following the example of Christ or sinking into oblivion, depending on the use they made of their talents and ideals, Dean Powell declared.

Mrs. McHenry Dies; Aided CarryNation

Wichita, Kans., June 18 (AP).—Mrs. Myra McHenry, 91, associate of the late Carry Nation during her saloon wrecking days in Kansas, died last night.

After 37 years of crusading against the demon rum, during which she was arrested 41 times, Mrs. McHenry astonished prohibitionists in 1932 by coming out in favor of repealing the eighteenth amendment.

Marvin Beers Elected Head of Civic Theater

Newly elected officers of the Washington Civic Theater are Marvin Beers, radio director of the Forest Service, president; Mrs. Emil Hurja, vice president; George Cain, of the Interstate Commerce Commission, secretary, and Kenneth Banghart, of Thos. Cook & Sons, treasurer.

The first production under the new officers will be "God Is Love," by Malcolm Ross, publicity director of the National Labor Relations Board. The play will be performed al fresco Wednesday night at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Waldron Faulkner, 3415 Thirty-sixth street northwest.

Burglar Keeps Busy Stealing Screen Doors

Police last night sought a screen door burglar who apparently believed, with the weather man, that yesterday's frigid temperatures could not last.

George W. Phifer, of 3338 Erie street southeast, reported to police that two screen doors had been stolen from 2331 Thirty-sixth street southeast and two more from 2317 of the same street. Both houses were new and unoccupied.

Traffic Crashes In District Area Injure Six

Six casualties yesterday were added to the week-end traffic toll in and near the District.

Samuel P. Densmore, 67, of 1934 Ninth street northwest, received a fractured arm and shoulder when struck by a car at the intersection of Eleventh and U streets northwest. He was treated at Garfield Hospital.

Injured in an accident at Bladensburg road and Eastern avenue northeast were Beatrice Eckhard, 22, of 1330 L street northwest, face injuries; Mildred Barrett, 25, of Kenilworth, Md., sprained back, and Joseph Hatchner, 27, of 1807 Riggs street northwest, possible fracture of the leg.

Frank Scott, of 5435 Thirty-second street northwest, suffered head lacerations when his car crashed at Fourteenth and E streets northwest with a Naval Hospital ambulance racing to an emergency obstetrical case. Roland P. Herbert, of 118 Jefferson street northwest, suffered bruises and cuts when the car in which he was a passenger collided with another machine near Rock Point, Md.

Kensington's Boys' Town Holds First Open House

Boys Town yesterday held its first formal open house in Christ Episcopal Church rectory in Kensington, Md., led by the Rev. D. Wade Stafford. Guests from Washington and many sections of Maryland were served a buffet supper prepared under supervision of Ted Thayer, new educational director, and tea by Misses Janet West and Margaret Lybolt.

Guests, who were escorted on a tour of the town, included Mrs. Irone Hancock Russell, Mrs. Madeline Fennell, new Montgomery County probation officer, and the Rev. Wendell Tredick, pastor of Kensington Baptist Church.

Mrs. James E. Rawlings, mother of James Rawlings, one of the citizens of Boys Town, was present.

Rabbis Back Admission of Refugees

Urge Wagner-Rogers Bill Passage to Aid 20,000 Children From Germany

Approval of the Wagner-Rogers bill to admit 20,000 German children to America, outside of the country's quota, was recommended at yesterday's closing sessions of the Central Conference of American Rabbis.

"Instead of depressing our economy, children so admitted will prove an asset in years to come," declared the conference, which earlier elevated Rabbi Emil W. Leipsiger, of New Orleans, from the vice presidency to the presidency, succeeding Rabbi Max Currick, of Erie, Pa.

Other Officers Elected

Also elected were Rabbis James G. Heller, Cincinnati, vice president; Rabby Harry S. Margolis, St. Paul, treasurer; Rabbi Isaac E. Marcuson, Macon, Ga., recording secretary, and Rabbi Sidney Regner, Reading, Pa., corresponding secretary.

Named to the executive board of the conference were Rabbi Currick; Rabbi Solomon Freehof, Pittsburgh; Rabbi Joshua Liebman, Boston; Rabbi Jacob Rudin, Great Neck; Rabbi Samuel Wolk, Wilkes-Barre, Pa., and Rabbi Joseph Shankman, New Rochelle.

Rabbis Morton Berman, Chicago, and William Braude, Providence, R. I., were placed on the board of managers of synagogue and school extension.

U. S. Democracy Praised

The conference adopted a resolution affirming its belief in American democracy "as the best form of government, because by its written constitutions, both National and State, and by its highest tribunal, the Supreme Court of the United States, which interprets the spirit of these constitutions, American democracy best protects the inalienable rights of all individuals, irrespective of the blood in their veins or the religious creeds they may profess."

A resolution disapproving the Hobbs bill to establish detention camps for undesirable or criminal aliens subject to deportation, whose native countries cannot or will not receive them, was adopted by the conclave, which called upon all religious groups in America "to join with us in vigorous refusal to countenance un-American and irreligious propaganda and to do their share in bringing about that orderly state of society by respect for truth, good will, confidence and helpfulness."

The Cinema Graduates From the Kindergarten

New Year's Product Embraces Expansive Scope; Gene Ford Reappointed Manager of Capitol; News Notes and Gossip of the Theater

THIS IS THE SEASON of the year when all of the major motion picture producing companies burst forth in huge multi-colored "spreads" in the trade press, detailing the superlative merits of the things they plan in the way of screen entertainment for the year 1939-40. These ads are something to see—Technicolor productions every one!

BELL

There already has been set forth here a rather comprehensive survey of what Paramount has up its sleeve for the forthcoming releasing season. Our information came hot from the sales convention of Paramount's world-wide organization, which closed last week in Los Angeles. Universal and RKO-Radio seem to be next on the tapis. The release dates for their annual announcements have not yet quite arrived, but a preview squint at what they will say gives rise to a few vagrant thoughts in the mind—if any—of a commentator who has been riding along with the celluloids now practically since the day of their inception as a source of mass entertainment.

What occurs to me, first, is that the cinema, finally, has grown up. I mean to say that pictures are being made today that would have been deemed impossible "box-office" only a few years ago. Perhaps it is the public that has grown up and the shadow drama is only trying to keep pace.

At any rate, the fact remains that in breadth of subject matter, freedom of treatment of topics once held taboo, and an all-around mature approach, the films at last are finding themselves and finding, too, that that "10-year-old mentality" they're were supposed to play down to was a gross canard.

The passion for motion picture plays extolling Americanism in all of its fundamental manifestations may have subsided a bit, but the public no longer objects to fantasy, costume pictures, "Westerns," whimsical character studies—and character studies that are not so whimsical, as note "Good-Bye, Mr. Chips" and "Young Mr. Lincoln"—historical romances and whatnot.

Wide Catholicity of Taste

The screen used to be pretty rigidly confined to the "boy-meets-girl" sort of thing—and, of course, still is—but the point is that it has been demonstrated that there is so wide and so profitable an audience for every other type of picture that the new year's composite roster of projected releases would read like a catalogue of everything that is worthy in literature, the drama, history, biography, popular fiction and even the comic strips. There is to be added to all that, needless to say, all of the product of the creative imaginations of the Hollywood scenarists who do original stuff. Among these gentlemen are to be found some of the keenest minds devoting themselves to the "writing game."

I have been a little surprised, as I have read the advance announcements, by the catholicity of taste revealed by those having the productional activities of Hollywood in charge. They seem to have overlooked nothing. So with this forewarning, don't you be surprised if next season discloses the greatest diversity of film fare in the history of gelatin entertainment.

"Room Service," that hilarious farce of a stranded theatrical promoter marooned in a swank hotel, will be presented tomorrow and Wednesday nights by the Greenbelt Players. Curtain time is announced as 8:15 p. m. The Greenbelt Players offer more than a mere opportunity to witness the fifth production of their current reason. They invite you to come early, look the town over and, if you feel that way about it, take a dip in the new pool. This added inducement, if temperatures should return to last week's high levels, in itself should serve to pack the house—and overflow the pool.

This announcement was made yesterday by Eastern Division Manager Carter Barron, of Loew's, Inc., pursuant to appointments made by Joseph R. Vogel, chief of Loew's national chain of theaters. Mr. Ford takes over the duties formerly discharged by Howard Burkhardt, transferred to Loew's Orpheum Theater in Boston, vice George Jones, resigned.

This is not a new tour of duty for Mr. Ford. It will be recalled that he served as both manager and chief of production at Loew's Capitol for almost two years prior to his transfer to Loew's radio station WHN in New York, in 1937. It was Gene, too, who produced all six of the Capitol's "Going Native" revues, which have become an August fixture on F street. A versatile fellow this Ford chap. He is pianist, composer, writer of skits, stage director and all-around theater factotum. He began his career as a piano player in the old nickelodeon days and later was associated with Charles B. Dillingham in the production of many of that "old master's major musical comedy productions.

Happy as his many friends will be at his return to his former post, they will feel an equal degree of regret at losing Howard Burkhardt, who, in his comparatively short tenure at the Capitol, has proved himself a prince of a fellow with whom it has been a genuine pleasure to be associated, either in a professional or lay capacity. These boys can make it pretty tough for the drama desks if they want to. Gene and Howard have never wanted to. Hail and farewell, old friends—respectively, of course.

Speaking of the suburban drama, as we were somewhere back there, it should be remembered that tonight is the night the Cross Roads Players, down at Bailey's Cross Roads, Va., break out "Candlelight," the second production of their season. Out at the Roadside, on the Rockville pike, t'other side of Bethesda, the second week of "The Pioneer's Daughter" will begin at 8:40 this evening. What a play! You probably will never see another one quite like it. There is another announcement that might be risked with regard to another summer theater that has encountered all manner of travail this season, but we refuse to say a word until we get the "go" sign from the management.

The Troupers of East Washington Community Center would like to have it known that they will hold additional tryouts for their Sylvan Theater production of "Hail Nero" on Thursday night of this week, June 22, at 8 o'clock, at Eastern High School. Men especially are needed. So there it is.

And-That-Reminds-Me-Note

Remember when the old Aborn Light Opera Company and the Columbia Players, at the National and Columbia, respectively, used to play through from May to September without a break—and to capacity business, too?

Save for the Bracelets, It Might Be a Sarong!

DOROTHY LAMOUR

in a new and languorous pose, which is reproduced here for no reason at all, except that Miss Lamour will be coming along soon as costar with Jack Benny and Edward Arnold in Paramount's production of "Man About Town," in which she abandons the sarong for smart silks and satins. That probably is what she is wearing here—or can't you tell, either?

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, June 18.

MARIAN ANDERSON: The other night Eleanor Roosevelt was the guest of honor at the dinner tendered by the National Democratic Committee for its ten-State regional conference. Three members of your race were assigned to sit at a table occupied by women of lighter complexion—who objected. And so the three dusky ladies joined the table of Malvina Thompson—Mrs. Roosevelt's secretary . . . Mrs. Charles S. Whitman, wife of the former Governor of New York, brought nine guests to the dinner. The arrangements committee asked her to furnish the names of those guests for publication in the seating list. "Oh, no," Mrs. Whitman replied, "no names—they're Republicans."

EDDIE CANTOR: Did you resign from the American Federation of Actors the other day and order your name removed from the letterheads? . . . John Kieran: Gracie Allen will appear on "Information Please" Tuesday. As a publicity stunt she tried to enroll at C. C. N. Y. for one day, but the authorities refused, because she couldn't meet the entrance requirements . . . Lieut. Gov. Charles Poletti: Your wife has been asked to become a trustee of Vassar . . . Ben Smith: Dick Merrill, whose round-trip transatlantic flight you backed, insists he still hasn't received any money.

CHIANG KAI-SHEK: Last week one of Tallulah Bankhead's visitors brought two Oriental ladies with him . . . "How do you do," Tallulah welcomed. "I've been doing so many benefit shows for your people, to help them against those terrible Japanese" . . . "But, Miss Bankhead," the Orientals informed, "we are 'those terrible Japanese' " . . . "Ah," Tallulah countered, "but I smiled when I said that."

BENNY GOODMAN: Lillian Roth, who retired from the stage to marry Judge Shalleck, will try a new field. She's organizing an all-male orchestra, and will conduct as well as provide the vocalizing . . . Clifford Odets: Morris Carnovsky was offered a ten-week job this summer to work in the movie, "The Hunchback of Notre Dame." He turned it down in favor of practice sessions with the Group Theater this summer . . . William Green: Harry Richman, vice president of the American Federation of Actors, is retaining his own lawyers to fight to preserve the organization . . . Sir Ronald Lindsay: Last week Oscar of the Waldorf was asked about sausages. "Oh, we never bother about that," he replied haughtily. The next day hot dogs were served to the King and Queen of England.

GEN. FRANCO: Sylvia Townsend Warner, the British novelist, recently sold an article to the New Yorker, about a Spanish refugee who escaped from war-torn Spain to London, only to find the Britishers digging trenches in Hyde Park . . . Mrs. Warner received her check from the New Yorker in due course . . . One week later she received another letter from the editors. "We've reread your article," it announced, "and it impressed us so much that we're sending you this additional check."

HARPERS: John Gunther, author of the new best-seller, "Inside Asia," will leave for Europe shortly. He'll be the traveling correspondent for the National Broadcasting Co. . . . Vincent Astor: Your brother-in-law Prince Obolensky, who is exiled from Russia, continues to visit the Soviet Pavilion at the fair. Each time, he emerges shouting, "Lies, all lies."

GEORGE VI: Elliott Roosevelt is telling his friends how nice you and your Queen are . . . "He's a regular guy, too," Elliott stated last night. "Did you see those pictures of him riding in my father's car, wearing a shirt without a tie?" . . . "Yes, but in those pictures he was leaning forward," Elliott was reminded, "as if he was scared of your father's driving" . . . "Well," Elliott confessed, "so am I."

EQUITY: Sinclair Lewis met Burgess Meredith the other night. "As long as you're becoming an actor," Meredith told him, "I'm going to start writing" . . . "Good," replied Lewis, "that'll bring you in touch with the old folks" . . . Il Duce: France may provide a job for King Zog of Albania—in Syria . . . John Steinbeck: J. Walter Rubin, the movie producer, tried to interest an actor into accepting a role in "Stand Up and Fight." "Mervyn Leroy says this role is just like that of Lennie in 'Of Mice and Men,'" Rubin spieled. "He's wrong. It's a combination of Will Rogers, Buddy Ebsen and Lennie."

Hope to Offer Self in Lieu Of a Picture

'Fan' Request Prompts Comedian to Journey To Native England

By Frederick C. Othman

United Press Hollywood Correspondent

Hollywood, June 18.—Bob Hope, our favorite comedian—and yours, too, he hopes—received a fan letter the other day from a lady at Eltham, Lewisham, England. She she said would he send her an authographed photograph?

This was a strange thing. Hope was born in Eltham, himself, and the lady's name seemed familiar. It also was "Hope." She was his aunt.

So Bob sent her no photograph. Instead he bought tickets for himself and wife aboard the Normandie, sailing August 2, so that his relatives can see him in person.

When we had lunch with him he'd just returned from the passport office and he had his birth certificate in his pocket. We grabbed it, and before he could get it back, discovered that his real name is Leslie Towns Hope.

A Life-long Secret

He said this was a misfortune he'd kept secret all his life and that if we printed it, he'd squirt a well known brand of tooth paste down our ears.

Hope leaves Hollywood, where he has become a top movie and radio star in two years flat, next week for stage appearances in Minneapolis, Chicago, Cleveland, and New York.

Then aboard the Normandie the passengers will make him sing "Thanks for the Memory," and "Two Tired People," songs he introduced in pictures, all the way across. And in London he will play a couple of weeks at the Palladium.

"It'll all be fun for me," he said. "I like to get up in front of folks and try to make them laugh."

Hope and his wife will try in England to adopt a small boy.

"If we can't find one that likes us there," he said, "we will attempt to get one in this country. But I'd particularly like to adopt a British child and bring him up as an American like me."

Squeak Determined Career

Hope left England when he was 4 years old, settling in Cleveland, where his father was one of that city's leading building contractors. His mother had been an English light opera star, and Hope faced his first audience at one of her musicales. In boyish soprano, he sang "The End of a Perfect Day," until half the song was over.

Then his voice cracked and he was stranded in the middle of a note with an adolescent squeak. The resultant laughter decided him then and there that his future, if any, was in the field of comedy. He's been doing all right at it ever since.

Though he's in his early thirties now, Hope was a vaudeville headliner for years. Nobody but vaudeville fans knew him. Then he got his chance in a musical comedy, "Roberta," which was a smash hit and made him a full-fideged star.

No Time for Play

Paramount brought him to Hollywood and put him in seven pictures, last of which was "The Cat and the Canary," still to be released. A tooth-paste company also hired him to extol the virtues of shiny molars, while the benefit promoters have had him cracking jokes free on his infrequent off nights.

"I've been so busy I haven't had time to do anything," he said. "I haven't even had a chance to get in trouble. So I'm really looking forward to this vacation."

And while we're on the subject of vacations, we want to report that this will be our last column for a few weeks; we're going where there are no motion-picture theaters, 10 percenters, publicists, spotlights, previews, sound stages or stooges.

Some of our good friends in the picture business will carry on for us, with such stories as we'd never dare write about them. Give an actor a typewriter and he tells all.

Any how, we hope you enjoy what they write, and in about one minute now we'll tack the "Gone Fishing" sign on our office door.

Louella O. Parsons

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, June 18 (INS).—You won't have to have England's picturesque beefeaters take you around the Tower of London if Rowland vs. Lee's historical screen play, built around the ancient, tradition-laden fortress, is as realistic as it sounds. Lee will produce and direct a story of the fifteenth century, when Richard III imprisoned his two little nephews and did away with them so there would be no obstacle between him and the throne.

LOUELLA PARSONS

Permission has been obtained from British authorities for Universal to film scenes in authentic locations in and around the tower. With Basil Rathbone as the dastardly Richard III, the cruel, cruel uncle who put the little golden-haired princes in the tower, and Boris Karloff as the executioner, this should be a thriller. Robert N. Lee, brother of Rowland, has been working on the idea for several months.

Not surprising that Geraldine Fitzgerald is homesick for Hollywood and yearns to return. She writes that she is living 36 miles from Dublin in a 600-year-old castle without modern plumbing. Dublin, she says, is so dressy that she longs for Hollywood's informality. Jack Warner has cabled her that when she returns in the late fall she will be starred in John Van Druten's "Lost Beauty," a highly dramatic story reminiscent of Helen Hayes' "Sins of Madelon Claudet," and that George Brent will be her co-starring partner.

Producers have been increasingly wary about making pictures with Mexican locales, for the reason that our neighbor country so bitterly resents showing their people in any but most flattering light. M-G-M has bought "Bonanza," a story of the Mexican silver mines, and Wally Beery will play a Mexican peon farmer. The action takes place in the early 1900's, and the studio will be very careful to avoid political complications or any interpretation that might give offense to the fiercely nationalistic Mexicans. Wally's most successful picture, remember, was "Viva Villa," in which he played the famous bandit.

Don't tell me Dick Powell and Joan Blondell were overlooking the excitement of the nags and the social season at Saratoga when they signed for one week of stock at the swank racing capital starting August 2. Yes, Dick and Joan are going back to costar in "Burlesque," which brought fame to Barbara Stanwyck and the late Hal Skelly, and they should be excellent. But out of the six weeks offered them they agreed to sign for only one and plan to vacation the rest of the time.

Chatter in Hollywood: Hope Brian Donlevy doesn't do a Dorothy Di Frasso when he takes his gang to Death Valley to look for a lost gold mine in the Panamint Mountains. Anyway there won't be a mutiny aboard ship like Dorothy Mario Bello and those other hardy treasure hunters encountered on account of there's not enough water in Death Valley this time of year to wade in—much less mutiny on. Staking out this mine has been an obsession with Brian ever since he heard about it and now he's got four carloads of pals equally steamed up over his "find." Or if they aren't steamed up now they will be when they start searching Death Valley, where its 110 in the shade if you can find any.

George Raft has a chance to stay on at Universal if he feels so inclined. They have bought an original story called "Unseen Enemy," suggested by the life story of Fritz Duquesne and it is a highly dramatic fable that would give George the type of character he has been yearning to do. Duquesne, following the Boer War, continued to wage a one-man war against the British in South Africa as a means of revenge for the death of his wife and sister who were killed in a raid.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: The diamond and ruby bracelet Wooley Donahue bought will not be worn by Joan Bennett, who said no; is Robert ("Union Pacific") Presnell's devotion to Kay Fleters as serious as it looks? Mrs. Rita Beery Foyt, Wally's former wife, back in town doing slapsy Maxie's with her bridegroom; Mary Eaton, former Follies beauty at a nearby table with her very rich husband; Jean Negulesco, who for so many months could see only Binnie Barnes at the Delhaven teaing with Virginia Field; Cy Bartlett and Barbara Brewster spent Sunday morning horseback riding; the Milton Brens and Jean and Charlie Feldman planed to New York to take in the fair; Rose Hobart, who appeared briefly in the movies, is the house guest of the Mischa Auers; Balanchine, Zorina's bridegroom, is arranging an exhibit of his etchings at a local art gallery; Ingrid Bergman follows Garbo's example in taking plenty of exercise. She leaves the studio every night on foot.

You ought to hear Binnie Barnes sing "Heaven Will Protect the Working Girl," a number she does in "Frontier Marshall;" rumor is strong that Guinn "Big Boy" Williams will grab the Lennie role in "Of Mice and Men;" the Ritz brothers, whose pictures are banned in Germany, had to study German for a song they sing in their next movie; the pretty girl Edgar Bergen squired to the Cocoanut Grove for the second time was Thora Taylor, Ogden, Utah, personality winner; the Russell Gleasons have named their baby Michael Morgan, and he's the reason that Lucille, his grandmother, hesitated before accepting that job in the East; Wayne Morris has received permission from Warners to act as Maxie Rosenbloom's second in his forthcoming prize fight; Fred Stone and his daughter Paula are reading a play in which they may appear together in New York next season.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., June 18.—Owen Moore's sudden end revealed again that you can only make the front page if you're a gilt-edged star at $5,000 per or your death is a tragic one. Poor Owen, he was such a handsome Irishman. Had an honest zest for living fully. His sense of humor seldom failed him, even at the most poignant momoment. I recall his telling me how a slick salesman sold him a plot with a view and a tree when his mother, whom he worshiped, passed on.

HOPPER

For those who don't know, I'd like to pause here and tell you that Myron Selznick, our leading agent, never stopped trying to get Owen a job in the movies. And when he failed, gave him an allowance from his own pocket. It's incidents like these that make the pulse run faster.

Some of our favorites whose end came before their allotted time Paul Bern, discovered shot. Thelma Todd, John Bowers walked into a sea of sunsets. Marie Prevost, dead three days before discovered. Karl Dane, suicide. Also Jack Daugherty, husband of Barbara Lamarr. Ross Alexander and his wife. He had one of the most brilliant futures in town.

Peppy Lederer. Alan Crosland, auto accident.

Kenneth Hawks with ten assistants, air accident. Olive Thomas, and the following were awfully young to die: Jean Harlow, Renee Adoree, Wally Reid, Valentine, Dorothy Dell, Martha Mansfield, Jack and Lottie Pickford, Irving Thalberg, Mabel Normand, Ward Crane, Jack Gilbert. But the most tragic of all was little Lucille Rickson—she was only 13.

May they rest in peace. And have mercy on the rest of us, for we'll be needing it.

Less than three summers ago I sat on the balcony of the Admiralty Building in London, and watched the trooping of the colors for King Edward's birthday. A glorious and impressive sight. The present King and his brothers rode in that parade. That day, on all sides, I heard how the English longed for a closer tie with Americans. They felt that the two nations could, and should, control the peace of the world.

Now that Their Majesties have gone home, it looks as though that dream may become a reality. Why not? Blood and common language tie us together.

They were the first to laugh when a wag in Washington yelled out: "Look, the British are coming." They came, saw and conquered. And what a lesson Queen Elizabeth left behind. I've never seen a happier, smiling face under all conditions. I'm hoping our Hollywood brightlights will remember her when they're tired, bored or their feet hurt. Many times I've wanted to say, "Smile, damn you, smile."

At our broadcast here, which the English gave for them (by the way, that couldn't have happened over there, for radio's under government control) one of our bright lads wanted Ronnie Colman to do the abdication speech from "The Prisoner of Zenda."

Freddie Bartholomew wrote his own speech, got up at 7 a. m. so he wouldn't be late. Vivien Leigh went into a jitter when she heard Laurence Olivier's voice from New York. Edna Best looked bored when she heard Herbert Marshall.

They were handed the wrong words of "The Star-Spangled Banner." Sir Cedric Hardwicke, laughing because in the same mail he got an invitation to visit Their Majesties, and another to a party given by "Prince Mike" Romanoff.

Gertie Lawrence, so British you could have cut it with a knife. They all sang 'Hold Tight" when their pictures were snapped.

I loved David Niven's crack: "I wonder if any of us will be on the team next year?" I wonder, too. Best thing in the program was Greer Garson and Leslie Howard's scene from "Good Bye Mr. Chips."

It took Mike Romanoff to put the phonies in our village in their places. They just weren't invited to his party. It was one of the most hilarious events in our history. I saw Kay Francis there for a moment and asked Mike if she'd been turned away. He said, "You see Hedda, I don't know Miss Francis." Later I found out, he'd been asked to pose with her and refused.

Roving Cossacks at Hollywood Home

The modern "men without a country" have finally found a home in America, it has been disclosed.

The men in question are members of the Don Cossack Chorus, world-famous singing organization organized by Serge Jaroff in a prison camp near Constantinople in 1923.

The group makes its screen debut in "Hotel Imperial" singing with Isa Miranda, although the choir has been touring the world for years.

Star Really Hurt In Boxing Scenes

Fred MacMurray was being treated today for a painfully rope-burned back, suffered in a boxing scene with Eddie Hogan in Paramount's "Invitation to Happiness."

Action called for Hogan to knock MacMurray into the ropes, and then slide him along the strands with a left hook. After numerous rehearsals and takes, MacMurray had suffered so many rope burns that he had to be patched up by the company doctor.

POVICH

To Whom It May Concern:

There is something more than slightly reminiscent of the bleating of another Briton as Sydney Wooderson yells "Foul!" following his defeat in the Princeton mile . . . it smacks strongly of the-after-the-battle bleating of Fainting Phil Scott, the horizontal heavyweight, save for the fact that Fainting Phil was a deep basso and Wooderson is on the chirping side . . . but their readiness to accuse is strikingly similar . . . it may be an injustice to Wooderson, however, to mention him in the same paragraph with Scott . . . after all, Wooderson has been a great champion . . . and perhaps he is entitled to the benefit of all doubts concerning the cleanliness of the Princeton race . . . because amateur foot-racing is not as pure as it is popularly supposed . . . Glenn Cunningham, employing much the same tactics as were used against Wooderson Saturday, left the track at Boston two years ago with the boos of spectators ringing in his ears despite his victory.

Challedon looked Johnstown in the eye in the Dwyer Stakes, and it wasn't Johnstown that chucked it . . . the son of Jamestown was supposed to quit whenever something ran with him and started to make a race out of it, but the farther Challedon went, the farther he was outdistanced . . . Sun Lover, which finished second in the Dwyer, is the horse that broke the track record at New Orleans four days before the last New Orleans Derby, and on Derby Day left his race on the track earlier in the week . . . save for his miserable failure in the mud of the Preakness, Johnstown might have gone down with Man o' War as a super horse . . . Man o' War's mud form is still moot, incidentally, because he never ran any of his races on a muddy track . . . perhaps the best Johnstown vs. Man o' War comparison may be gleaned from the bookies' odds on the two horses . . . Johnstown was quoted at 1 to 5 in the Dwyer . . . when Man o' War won it in 1920, he was 1 to 20.

Griffith Off on Scouting Tour

Clark Griffith will go on a personal scouting tour for the Nats this week, with his first call being Chattanooga . . . he will investigate the talents of an outfielder named Nicholson who is knocking down the fences in the Southern Association . . . Griffith has ordered his son, Calvin, manager of the Charlotte club, to convert Roberto Ortiz into an outfielder . . . as a pitcher the other day Ortiz lost the game but made four hits himself . . . the Nats' owner visions him as a power in the Nats' outfield by 1941 . . . because the Brooklyn Dodgers discovered they had 26 players on their roster, one over the limit, Freddie Sington was sent to the Louisville club . . . despite the fact that in his last two times at bat for the Dodgers he singled and doubled as a pinch-hitter . . . Sington, who failed in two trials with the Nats, was sold to Brooklyn by Joe Engel for $20,000.

Pete Sarron is currently in New York attempting to complete negotiations for a lightweight title fight with Henry Armstrong . . . Sarron, who lost the 126-pound featherweight title to Armstrong after winning the early rounds, has an idea that he can lick the little Negro at the lightweight limit of 135 pounds . . . because Joe Louis is superstitious, Mike Jacobs will take a rap that may go as high as $30,000 in the Louis-Galento fight . . . Louis refuses to fight in the Garden's Long Island City Bowl, where no champion has ever successfully defended a title, and Jacobs thus is forced to hire Yankee Stadium and cut the New York ball club in for a generous percentage of the receipts . . . just at a time when movie companies are envisioning profits from fight films, with the Federal law permitting their transportation nearing passage, television is coming along to knock the bottom out of fight pictures.

Bouquets for Helen Dettweiler

Helen Dettweiler's victory in the women's Western Open was no mean feat, considering that tournament is second only to the women's national Amateur in ranking . . . it was a remarkable debut for the local girl as a pro, and a feather in the lid of the golf club company that is her sponsor . . . she won the title the hard way, beating the defending champion in the finals . . . Miss Dettweiler, like the other three women professionals in the Western Open, is barred from the women's National Amateur which, for that reason, may be a hollow sort of tournament despite its No. 1 rating . . . whenever the girls get around to playing the National Women's Open, a true champion can be established.

The American League has repealed its rule of last month to the effect that all fielders' gloves must contain lacings between the thumb and fingers, with the practice of leather webbing discontinued . . . under the new interpretation, only the first basemen are prohibited from using the leather webbing . . . Charley Gelbert has not yet been advised of the outcome of his appeal for the $7,500 purchase price paid by the Nats to the Toledo club, which he is claiming . . . Judge Landis still has his case under advisement, and Gelbert is smart enough not to attempt to build a fire under the Judge . . . Joe Kuhel and Zeke Bonura, ex-first basemen of the Nats, are now among the five leading hitters of their respective leagues, which should be no consolation to Clark Griffith, who is struggling along with a B league first sacker . . . but Manager Bucky Harris envisions Bob Prichard as a terrific help to the Nats after being given time to adjust himself to the better pitching he is seeing.

When Walter O'Hara, New England racing tycoon, was in Washington attempting to legalize racing at the Benning track, and flourishing elaborate plans for a two-million-dollar plant, he was exhibiting merely the blue prints of his Narragansett track . . . an exhibition of water-colors by Joseph W. Golinkin, famed portrayer of sports events, contains a Yankee Stadium scene in which he muffed one . . . putting the home players in gray uniforms and the visiting team in white . . . Whitlow Wyatt, of the Dodgers, whose chief claim to fame when he was an American Leaguer was the fact that he beaned Buddy Myer and sent him to a Detroit hospital, is now the pitching sensation of the National League, with six victories and no defeats.

Bees Divide With Reds; Fette in One-Hitter

Cincinnati Wins Opener, 12-6; Bows, 5-0, To Mastery of Right-Handed Veteran; Werber Gets Five for Five in Opener

By the Associated Press.

Cincinnati, June 18.—Rain fell on Crosley Field, and hits landed all over the lot here today as the Boston Bees and the Cincinnati Reds divided a double-header before 27,100 fans huddled under umbrellas and raincoats.

Lou Fette silenced the National League pace-setters in the nightcap as he allowed only one hit to give Boston a 5-to-0 victory.

Cincinnati won the opener, 12 to 6, in a slugging match which gave Lefty Lee Grissom his sixth win of the season.

Harry Craft singled in the fifth inning to ruin a no-hit record for Fette, making his fourth shutout. Only two Redlegs got as far as second base as Fette recorded his eighth victory in 10 starts.

Rabbit Warstler, shifted from lead-off position to near the bottom of the batting order for the final game, drove in four of the Bees' runs, his two-base blow in the eighth coming with the bases loaded. Paul Derringer, who gave up 13 hits, was charged with the loss.

Five Redlegs had scampered across the rain-sodden bases before the Bees could end the first inning of the opener. Danny MacFayden was the first of four pitchers who attempted to halt the 16-hit attack

Parker Beats Mako, Wins Net Title in St. Louis

By International News Service.

St. Louis, Mo., June 18.—Frankie Parker, Pasadena, Calif., won the third annual Triple "A" Invitation tennis championship today by defeating Gene Mako, Los Angeles, 6—3, 6—3, 6—4, in the men's singles finals this afternoon.

Parker joined Art Hendrix, Lakeland, Fla., and Elwood Cooke, Portland, Oreg., in gaining a leg on the Sidney Smith Trophy.

Parker held the advantage over his opponent throughout the match except in the third set when Mako carried the games to 4-all. The Los Angeles player had advantage point in the ninth game but netted the ball after which Parker won the next two points and the following game to take the set and match.

First and second round results:

First Round

Robert Low, Palo Alto, Calif., defeated William Janik, Chicago, 6—1, 6—0.

Scottish Soccer Team Beats U. S.

New York, June 18 (AP).—The Scottish Football Association's soccer team vanquished a picked American team, 4 to 2, in their return game at the Polo Grounds today before a crowd of 18,000.

A 2-to-2 tie prevailed at the end of the regulation periods and an overtime period was necessary to decide who was to take possession of the massive silver trophy donated by the Dominion of Canada Football Association. The Scots finished stronger than the Americans to drive in two more goals.

Jimmy Carabine, the $50,000 star fullback of Third Lanark, was switched to center forward for the tourists and he proved to be the big hero of the game by scoring three goals for the winners while Johnny Gilles got the other. The score at the interval was 2 to 2.

Joe Boyle and C. Altemose netted for the Americans.

Tigers Defeat Yankees, 8-5, Behind Rowe

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 18.—The Detroit Tigers, who practically dared the rest of the American League to do something about the Yankees, ripped out an 8-to-5 victory over New York's three-times world champions today and moved into a virtual three-way tie for third with Cleveland and Chicago.

With Schoolboy Rowe scattering eight hits for no more than one Yankee run to an inning, big Hank Greenberg led an assault on three New York pitchers with his sixteenth home run of the season and a double.

The homer came in the first inning with one on and the two-bagger in the fifth with the bases loaded, bringing in two runs. Pinky Higgins doubled for two more runs, sending Bump Hadley to the showers, and Steve Sundra was victimized for another in this inning.

It was the first defeat of the year

Two Swim Records Set in A.A.U. Event

Swan Lake, N. Y., June 18 (INS).—Helene Raines broke the 200-yard backstroke record and joined with Gloria Callem and Elizabeth Ryan in smashing the 300-yard medley record in the A. A. U. women's swimming meet at the President Hotel pool today. The new women's world marks were 2:49 and 3:34, respectively. Miss Raines cut 3.6 seconds off the backstroke mark held by Katherine Rawls.

Cubs Take Two From Dodgers, 1-0 and 9-1

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, June 18 (AP).—Pitchers Dizzy Dean and Bill Lee and Manager-Catcher Gabby Hartnett shared the spotlight today as the Chicago Cubs walloped the Brooklyn Dodgers twice, 1 to 0, and 9 to 1, before 27,192, largest crowd of the season.

Dizzy set the Dodgers down with six scattered hits in the first game, while Hartnett's tremendous home run in the centerfield bleachers in the fifth inning provided the winning margin. His long blow was one of two hits the Cubs garnered off Luke Hamlin and his relief, Tot Pressnell.

Twice the Dodgers led off an inning with hits, but on both occasions the runners, Mel Almada and Dolph Camilli, were thrown out at the plate. The victory was Dizzy's third and his second shutout of the season as against no losses.

In the second game Big Bill Lee,

32,000 See Bob Sustain Third Loss

Ostermueller Bests Him in First Game; Williams' Double Decides Nightcap

By the Associated Press.

Boston, June 18.—The Boston Red Sox extracted a pair of fine pitching performances from its faltering mound staff today to sweep a double-header from the Cleveland Indians by scores of 5 to 4 and 5 to 3. A crowd of 32,000 saw the games.

Lefty Fritz Ostermueller outpitched Bob Feller to win the first game, and then ancient Robert Moses Grove shaded Willis Hudlin to take the nightcap, which was called at the end of the eighth inning to conform with the State Sunday sports law.

Feller, who had beaten Boston twice this season, was yanked with one out and no one on in the eighth inning after he issued his fifth pass—to Catcher Johnny Peacock. With Mel Harder taking up the cudgels, Ostermueller bunted Peacock along to second, and Lou Finney, batting for Tommy Carey, drove the backstop home with the deciding run on a long double to deep left. It was Feller's third defeat against ten victories.

In the nightcap, Ted Williams' double with the bases full in the fifth inning provided the big thump toward Grove's sixth victory of the year. Three runs pattered across, giving Boston the lead and running Williams' runs-batted-in total to 52 for the season.

Cards Defeat Giants, Halt 9-Game Streak

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, June 18.—The St. Louis Cardinals, celebrating "Pepper" Martin today, piled up an early lead today at the expense of Bill Lohrman to defeat the New York Giants, 8 to 4, and retain second place in the National League flag race. The loss stopped the Giants nine-game winning streak.

The Cards, in tribute to their injured captain, scored three runs off Lohrman in the first and then added three more in the third off Carl Hubbell to assure victory.

Although giving way to a pinch hitter in the fifth inning, Bill McGee won his sixth game of the season against two defeats. Bob Weiland finished for the Redbirds.

The Giants were never able to push more than one run across an inning.

Johnny Mize, Cardinal first-baseman, stretched his hitting streak to eight straight when he singled and doubled his first two times up. He later hit another double.

Revolta-Picard Win Inverness Golf in Playoff

By the Associated Press.

Toledo, Ohio, June 18.—Johnny Revolta, of Evanston, Ill., rammed home a 30-foot birdie putt on the first hole of a three-way playoff today to win for himself and Henry Picard, of Hershey, Pa., the $5,200 fifth annual Inverness Four-ball Tournament.

In one of the most star-spangled finishes the classic has ever seen, Picard and Revolta, winners in 1935, rounded out the 126 holes of best-ball match play tied with Sam Snead and Vic Chezzi, the defending champions, and Byron Nelson, the National Open king, and Harold (Jug) McSpaden.

Pepper Gets Everything but Farm on 'Martin Day'

Litter of Pigs, Plow, Brood Mares Presented Cardinal Outfielder

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, June 18.—Thousands of hero-worshiping baseball fans paid their respects today to the ability, color, popularity and dash of "Pepper" Martin, but it wasn't a belated celebration of the 1931 World Series.

It was because the "Wild Horse of the Osage," after eight long years, is still on top, a great ball player, and his host of friends wanted to honor him this afternoon at Sportsmans Park, on "Pepper Martin Day."

The veteran Martin, now captain of the St. Louis Cardinals, had but one regret—he couldn't play against the New York Giants because of the recurrence of an old wrist injury.

At ceremonies at home plate preceding the game, at which Pepper was the recipient of many gifts, mostly for his farm "down Oklahoma way," the colorful outfielder responded:

"This is the greatest day of my career. I've just been an ordinary ball player all of my life, but I've given the game all that I've had."

So well was Martin remembered with gifts, including a pair of strawberry-roan brood mares, that spectators almost thought the diamond was going to be converted into a farm. The mares will be "Osage" and "Cimarron," their names selected in a contest among Cardinal fans.

Many dignitaries, including President Ford Frick, of the National League, and Jess (Pop) Haines, Martin's old teammate of pennant-winning days, attended the ceremonies.

Special delegations were here from Oklahoma City, Pepper's home town; from Fort Smith, Ark., where he played early in his professional career, and from many other cities.

"Get 'em good and fat," said Lon, "for we're all coming down to your farm next winter for a good ham dinner."

Currently the club's leading hitter, Martin's play and spirit have kept the rejuvenated Cardinals in first or second place most of the time since the 1939 season got under way. The club's recent slump has been attributed largely to Martin's forced absence from the field.

Other gifts included a Holstein heifer, a pedigreed beagle hound, a hayrake, an electric churn, a pair of pedigreed rabbits, an electric grindstone, a set of harness, a pair of double-trees, a pair of stirrups and two milkcans.

Two Games Today Close Nats' Series With St. Louis

Rained out yesterday, the Nats and Browns will close their series with a double-header today at Griffith Stadium, starting at 1:30 o'clock.

Hostilities were called off by the Griffith Stadium management yesterday an hour after the gates were opened, when the steady drizzle failed to slacken. Two thousand fans took rain checks.

Manager Bucky Harris will toss at the Browns today the two pitchers originally scheduled to work yesterday—Joe Krakauskas and Dutch Leonard. Vernon Kennedy and Roxie Lawson will toil for the Browns.

British, With 10-Goal Handicap, Beat American Polo Team, 16-14

Game's First 'Perfect Four' Fails; Cecil Smith Scores 5; U. S. Scoreless Last 2 Periods

By the Associated Press.

Westbury, N. Y., June 18.—Power applied by the United States' famed perfect polo team failed by three goals today as England's hard-riding quartet won the final game of the international series, 16 to 14.

Aided by a 10-goal handicap, the invaders came through after the 40-goal American four, riding as a team for the first time in competition, had tied the score in the sixth chukker. Playing a man-for-man defense against the Americans, the English held the home boys scoreless through the last two periods while Bob Skene came through in brilliant fashion to put the game on ice with a goal in the final two minutes of play.

The victory, coming after the U. S. had retained the Westchester Cup with two straight triumphs, was the first success of the English over the Americans since 1914. But it, too, was the first handicap match ever played by the two countries.

With Cecil Smith, long-hitting Texan, appearing in the line-up for the first time in the series, the four ten-goal players played brilliantly, but the handicap was too much. Smith, scoring the last of his five goals, tied the score with a 60-yard drive midway of the sixth chukker, but a minute later Bob Skene took a pass from Eric Tyrrell-Martin and put the English in front, 15-14, and there they stayed.

Then the English threw up their powerful defense with Tyrrell-Martin and Gerald Balding sticking to Smith and Phipps like leeches. Neither could the great Tommy Hitchcock, who, at times was brilliant but missed easy setups, or Iglehart shake loose. As a result the Americans went scoreless in the last two periods.

It was a miss by Hitchcock near the center of the field that set up the ball for Skene in the last chukker. The young Australian took the ball down the field and drove it in from 40 yards with two minutes to play.

Smith led the Americans with five goals but missed three free hits. Right behind him were Mike Phipps with four and Hitchcock with three. Iglehart accounted for the other two. Skene was the scoring ace for the English with five goals, three of which came after fouls by Americans. Balding added the other.

Improved Abrams Slight Choice Over Brouillard Tonight

10-Rd. Bout Expected to Draw 5,000

Georgie Arrives From New York in Excellent Shape; Middleweight Rivals Weigh In at 2

Georgie Abrams, Washington's latest hope for a world's champion boxer, will meet former Middleweight Champion Lou Brouillard, southpaw fighter from Worcester, Mass., in a ten-round fight tonight at Griffith Stadium.

Abrams, who arrived here yesterday from his training quarters in New York, was pronounced in "fine shape" by his handlers. Brouillard, who for the past two days has been topping off his training here, also has been proclaimed "ready."

Fighting before the home folks for the first time in some 11 months, Abrams, who rose out of the amateur ranks here, will be seeking to show the local fans his recent success in New York was well-deserved.

Fully Recovered

After suffering a severe back injury which nearly ended his career after his fight here last summer with Steve Mamakos, Georgie won his fight against the threat of invalidism in Hot Springs, Ark., and is now said to be fully recovered.

Betting odds on the fight tonight will be fairly close to even, according to reports yesterday. While Abrams has not displayed the powerful knockout punch his handlers would like to speak of, he has shown an ability to outthink his opponents in the ring. Brouillard has been fighting long enough to be called a veteran and will be at a disadvantage in the age statistics.

5,000 Expected

Brouillard, who once held the world's welterweight title, will be the first southpaw puncher faced by Abrams, who has been training with a left-handed hitter, Frankie Bruno, at Stillman's gym in New York.

Bruno will meet young Jack Dempsey, stablemate of Brouillard, tonight in the six-round semifinal fight. Another six rounds will bring together Johnny Shepherd, of Philadelphia, and Billy Bullock, of Washington.

Johnny DiMaggio, of Baltimore, will meet Baby Face Culler, of Washington, and Al Hart, Washington colored heavyweight, will meet Battling Mimms, of Baltimore, in four-rounders, beginning at 8:30 p. m.

Tonight's Line-Up At Griffith Stadium

Huntington Beats Annapolis, 10-8

Annapolis, June 18.—In the Southern Maryland League series Annapolis lost to Huntington here this afternoon, 10 to 8.

The visitors batted out two runs in the first and scored four in the second, chiefly on local miscues. The score was one-sided until the ninth, when, after Annapolis had scored one, Johnson hit over the center-field fence with the bases full.

for Hadley, who had won six. Three Yankee double plays helped him to pull through the first four innings with Joe Gordon hitting a homer in the third to keep the Bronx Bombers within range.

After piling on five runs in the fifth the Tigers coasted, scoring their final run in the sixth. The Yankees scored single tallies in the fifth, seventh, eighth and ninth—the run in the eighth being Joe DiMaggio's third homer of the season.

Before the game Manager Joe McCarthy of the Yankees was presented with the Sporting News award for the best manager of the 1938 season. Postmaster General James Farley made the presentation.

Louis Impressive Before 3,000 Fans

Pompton Lakes, N. J., June 18 (AP). Annoyed at reports of his poor form yesterday, Joe Louis treated a Sunday crowd of 3,000 to an impressive exhibition of boxing and punching in a spirited six-round program with four sparmates today.

The heavyweight champion dealt punishment to Willie Snell and Joe Banovic, who went one round each, and Jim Howell and George Nicholson, who worked two.

"It is a pleasure," said Brown, "to see a champion so earnest about his work. Louis is not holding Galento lightly and he is taking this match as seriously as he did his meeting with Schmeling last year. The champion is in superb condition."

Woodstock Wins Over Newmarket

Woodstock, Va., June 18.—Woodstock won a 6-to-4 decision from New Market here this afternoon in a Shenandoah County League game to remain in second position. New Market took an early 1-run lead but could not withstand the heavy batting attack of Woodstock's sluggers.

Al Sothoron, Ex-Cardinal Pitcher, Dead

46-Year-Old 'Spitballer' Succumbs After Short Complicated Illness

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, June 18.—Al Sothoron, one of the craftiest of the "freak" delivery pitchers who played a major role in professional baseball during the last quarter of a century, is dead.

SOTHORON

The 46-year-old former "spitballer" who helped the St. Louis Cardinals to their first pennant in 1926 died in a hospital here last night of a complication of diseases after a three weeks' illness.

Born at Bradford, Ohio, Sothoron had been making his home in New York. He is survived by his wife.

Sothoron started his major league career with the St. Louis Browns in 1914, and after a trip back to the minors was with the club through 1921. He also hurled for Boston and Cleveland in the American League. He ended his major league playing career with the Cardinals in 1926.

Later Sothoron managed Louisville of the American Association, and in 1933 coached for the Browns. Shortly afterwards he became manager of the American Association club at Milwaukee, where he had several successful years before he was dropped last season.

Granting of Snead Visa Will Leave W.Va.Title Begging

Bluefield, W. Va., June 18 (AP).—The coming chapter of the State Open Golf Tournament might be titled "The championship which depended on a visa, or what will Sam Snead do?"

Snead, king of the West Virginia pros for three years and therefore the defending champion, has announced he will sail for England and the British Open Wednesday—if he can get a visa in time.

For three years the White Sulphur Springs pro has taken the laurels in the tournament. Art Clark of Welch, has finished in second place as consistently.

Lyons Wins Seventh Straight; Tipton Stars in Debut

By International News Service.

Philadelphia, June 18.—After the veteran Teddy Lyons of the Chicago White Sox won his seventh straight victory of the season in the opening game, the Philadelphia Athletics blasted out 9 to 4 win in the night cap to gain an even break in today's double-header. The Sox won the opener 6 to 5.

Eric Tipton, Duke's all-American football star, made his debut in big league baseball when he started the second game for the A's in leftfield. He hit two singles in four times at bat and fielded three chances without an error.

Shea's 73 Wins Mid-Atlantic Medal Playoff Over Sharkey

Spencer's 67 New Beaver Dam Mark

Pairs With Bob Barnett to Beat Andy Gibson, Rut Coffey, 6 and 5; Warner Wins Saito Cup at Kenwood; Army-Navy Team Wins

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Buddy Sharkey picked up two strokes on the last hole in the Middle Atlantic Amateur medal playoff yesterday at Chevy Chase against Billy Shea but still lacked one shot for another tie and the Congressional youngster won the medal honors with a 4-over par 73 in the all-Georgetown University match. They deadlocked with 72's in last Wednesday's qualifying round.

Both boys were a little off on their tee-to-green game but made up for a lack of wood and iron shots with some great putting that kept them near par figures. Shea led by three strokes on the eighteenth tee, and finally dropped a 3-foot putt for a bogey 5 and the medal after Sharkey canned a 10-footer for a birdie, picking up two strokes. Shea trapped his tee shot on the eighteenth and was on the green in 3. His approach putt was 3 feet short but his next dropped for the 73.

Sharkey led for four holes, Shea evening the score on the fifth with a 15-foot birdie putt. They halved the sixth and then Sharkey missed par three consecutive holes and trailed at the turn, 36 to 38. Shea lost strokes on 11 and 13 with a trapped second and 3-putt green, but got them right back when Sharkey was short and also 3-putted on the alternate holes.

A fine ship shot and another 20-footer gave Shea a three-stroke lead on the sixteenth, where Buddy, Indian Spring Club champion, hooked a four-iron and took five. They halved the seventeenth in pars, preceding the decisive eighteenth.

The medalist prize was Shea's second trophy in the tournament, as he won the first flight consolation with a pair of 20-hole victories. He was Middle Atlantic champion in 1937.

BEAVER DAM

Cliff Spencer ran his total of course records to five yesterday with an easy 67 over his home Beaver Dam layout, as he and Robert T. Barnett, Chevy Chase professional, trounced the visiting duo of Andy Gibson, Maryland Open champion from Bonnie View, and Rut Coffey, Winchester mentor, 6 and 5 in the eighth annual exhibition match at the Landover Club.

Spencer was dropping iron shots on the pin for short putts all the way and made only two mistakes. He was five under par, with seven birdies and two bogey holes. He had eight 3's in the 18 holes. The winners were five up at the ninth hole.

The host pro and Barnett had a best ball of 64, lowest ever recorded on the severe par 72 course Barnett had 35-36, 71, figuring in both holes where Spencer was over with pars and a birdie on the 14th. Gibson had 74, with a sub-par 35 coming back, while Coffey was 76. The latter played after an all-night drive from Danville, where he finished in a tie for fourth in the Virginia Open on Saturday. The losers failed to win a hole.

After starting with a par, Spencer came through with birdies on the second and third and finished the nine with two more in succession for an out-going 33. He made in three-in a row with a birdie on the tenth, and added others on the 13th and 16th, with his longest putt of the day 12 feet. His five-putt attempt for another birdie and a 66 on the home green went completely around the cup before failing to drop.

It was Spencer's third course record 67 of the season, the others at Mt. Pleasant and East Potomac, while he also holds the official marks at Washington Golf and Country Club and Rolling road.

KENWOOD

Warner started with rounds of 88 and 84, but finished with a pair of 80's for a 332 gross total, and deducted a 72 handicap, an average of 18 per round, for the winning score.

T. E. Hanell was second after leading at the halfway mark. Hanell had 81-83-81 for his first three rounds, but went up to 93 on his final trip for a 338 gross, minus a 64 handicap for 274; 14 shot back.

B. W. Chidlaw played four remarkably consistent rounds of a trio of 78's and a 79, on his last round, for a 313 total, minus a 36 handicap for a 277.

WASHINGTON

Army and Navy Club's team handed the Washington Golf and Country Club linksmen a 14½ to 6½ defeat on the losers course in the first of a home and home team match series. Maj. McClure and Dr. McLister swept three points against Maj. Hartman and Capt. Edwards of the Service Club for nearly half of the losers total. Commander Popham, top golfer of the winners, was an easy winner in the No. 1 spot.

Army and Navy, 14½; Washington, 6½.

Commander W. S. Popham (A. and N.) defeated B. Freshman, 3 and 2; Lieut. Col. K. Buchanan (A. and N.) and A. G. Dezendorf, all even. Best ball, Army and Navy 3 and 1.

Maj. Cooley (A. and N.) defeated J. Kirchner, 2 up; J. H. Davidson (A. and N.) and J. B. Powell, all even. Best ball, Army and Navy 2 and 1.

Commander J. S. Phillips (A. and N.) defeated Maj. E. Y. Argo, 2 and 1; J. H. Wells (Wash.) defeated Capt. C. B. Nixon, 2 and 1. Best ball, Army and Navy 1 up.

Col. Bradley (A. and N.) defeated D. B. Tuxhorn, 5 and 4; Maj. Ransom (A. and N.) defeated R. D. Munson, 2 up. Best ball, Army and Navy, 5 and 3.

Maj. R. B. McClure (Wash.) defeated Maj. Hartman, 4 and 3; Dr. W. R. McLister (Wash.) defeated Capt. Edwards, 4 and 3. Best ball, Washington 3 and 1.

C. H. Dixon (Wash.) defeated L. Thomson, 2 and 1; Maj. Barton (A. and N.) and R. R. Hair, all even. Best ball, Army and Navy 1 up.

Commander J. H. Stevens (A. and N.) defeated Elmer Jenkins, 3 and 1; Jim Stevens, jr. (A. and N.) defeated J. A. Edmonds, 3 and 1. Best ball, Army and Navy 2 and 1.

The interclub team match scheduled at Washington was inaugurated with C. M. White's "Pelicans" defeating R. E. Hotze's "Moaners" 12½ to 5½, and John S. Nichol's "Scuffers" trouncing F. S. Pomeroy's "Dingbats" 9½ to 8½, in 12-man team play. L. Franklin's "Boasters" drew a bye.

CONGRESSIONAL

George Neville and George Hill topped the low net scores in the qualifying for the President's Cup Match Play Tournament at Congressional, while P. J. Winkler's 73 was the lowest gross total of the day. Neville scored 75, 11—64, and Hill 81, 17—64.

Other leaders included J. M. Trice, 79, 13—66; Marvin Johnston, 87, 20—67, and Dr. Noah Pomeroy, 80, 13—67. The first round of match play is scheduled July 1 and 2, and the semifinals and finals July 8 and 9.

CAPITAL

Only six teams are left in the Barry Pate Cup two-man team play at Capital after yesterday's third round, with Crill and Molloy defeating Shuff and Curtin in the feature, 1 up.

The Glen Echo golfers will qualify for a 20-man team next week, with the low scorers meeting the Catoctin Club, of Frederick, in a home and home match, July 9 here and August 20 away. The Frederick golfers defeated Tony Sylvester's Georgetown team earlier in the season.

E. J. Crill and George Molloy defeated H. Shuff and J. Curtin, 1 up; F. H. Benson and T. Buckingham defeated W. C. Wetzel and F. F. Rinaca, 5 and 3; John Phelan and L. J. Manders defeated Bill Alexander and H. O. Kephart, 3 and 2; George Keene and Y. Kinoshito defeated L. V. Ray and R. F. Hilton, 4 and 2; F. F. Gradoville and B. Benidi defeated E. Piper and M. J. Shoemaker, 2 and 1; Francis Keene and Bob Chamberlin all even with R. C. Rittenhouse and F. M. Hunter (playoff this week).

INDIAN SPRING

MANOR

J. T. Maddox added to Manor's large quota of eagles this season, knocking an eight-iron second shot in the cup on the par 4 seventh, while playing with R. C. Pettengill, Tommy Dennis and W. F. Beasley. The Husband-and-Wife tourney was postponed.

Potomac Park Golfers Beat Clifton Park

Special Dispatch to The Post

Baltimore, Md., June 18.—East Potomac Park, of Washington, conquered Clifton Park, 19½ to 13½, in a return team match played here yesterday. Eddie Meyer, Clifton champion, was the star of the No. 1 match, sinking a 30-foot birdie putt on the eighteenth green for all three Nassau points and medal 70 for himself. Johnny Bass, the course pro, and his partner had a 74. Tom Doerer, jr., team captain from Washington, registered a 72, and Mel Shorey, pro, took a 75.

But in other matches, Washington won 3 points four times, and in turn was blanked only in a forfeited test. G. C. Anderson, Clifton's one-armed golfer, did obtain personal revenge over H. Robinson, similarly handicapped opponent by beating him with an 87.

The scores:

East Potomac Park—Tom Doerer and Mel Shorey, 0; Lefty Phenix and Joe Mickey, 3; Ray Taff and Sam Parks, 1½. C. Picco and G. Edwards (forfeit), 0; Lew Spangler and Earl Murray, 3; L. M. Cole and John O'Reilly, 3; Joe Bailey and Leon Pound, 2½; Paul Paschke and George Bulger, 3; H. Robinson and J. Mowrey, ½; F. Haver and D. Wills, 1½; Anderson and Otterbach, 2½—Total, 19½.

Clifton Park—Eddie Meyer and Johnny Bass, 3; Mike Merryman and Luther Madison, 0; Henry Eser and Fred Koenig, 2½; Joe Vaeth and Charles Engler, 3; Mike Peterson and Ace Seery, 0; Lynwood Lovett and Earl Mather, 0; Mike D'Arcipretre and Joe Silver, ½; Bob Parker and G. W. McGee, sr., 0; G. C. Anderson and Walter Purcell, 2½; D. Carson and Arthur Guertler, 1½; D. Norwood and L. Haffner, ½—Total, 13½.

200 Alumnae Greet Washington Crews

New York, June 18 (AP).—A howling mob of 200 alumnae greeted Washington University's three crews at the World's Fair today.

Presented to the old grads at the court of sport, the varsity and jayvee crews that finished second in both races at Poughkeepsie yesterday were introduced en masse. But the frosh, winners of their race, were introduced individually.

Following the introduction and some short speeches, there was a reception at the State of Washington Building, and then the alds took a look at the fair.

They'll head for home or summer jobs tomorrow, Coach Al Ulbrickson said. There were 38 in the party, including school officials, coaches and crew members.

Junior Davis Cup Tennis Starts Minus 3 Best Players

With neither Allie Ritzenberg, last year's winner; nor Davie Johnsen nor Buddy Adair among 25 entries, the annual Junior Davis Cup tennis tournament opening this afternoon at Army Navy looms as a wide open affair.

Ritzenberg was entered but withdrew, it was said, because Eddie Becker, chairman of the Junior Davis Cup committee, believed he was too good for any junior field that did not include Johnsen or Adair.

The tournament will be concluded Friday afternoon. Doubles entries close at 4 o'clock, at which time the drawings will be made. Play in the doubles starts tomorrow.

Pairings for today: Billy Turner, Mile Martin, Doyle Royal, Harry Brinkerhoff, Griffin Holland, Eddie Richardson and DeWitt Armstrong drew byes. 10:30—Maurice Cowan vs. Richard Mayfield; Harold Landsman vs. David Smith. 11—Charles Freer vs. Robert Bensinger; Reef Gillespie vs. John Martin. 12:30—Myer Gelsand vs. F. Clark. 1—Jack Hoyt vs. John Hutchinson; Buddy Edwards vs. David Kay. 2:30—Bill Wickham vs. Eli Gottlieb; Bernie Blanken vs. Henry Watts.

2-Day Match At Richmond To Woodmont

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Richmond, June 18.—Woodmont Country Club golfers of Washington defeated Lakeside, 52 to 34, in a two-day match concluded here today over the Lakeside-Jefferson course.

The visitors took a lead in the four-ball matches on Saturday and increased the margin in the best ball and singles play yesterday.

Gene Larkin, visiting professional, and Morry Simon won 11½ of 12 points against Host Pro Allan Brodie and W. Galeskie, with Larkin shooting the best golf of the match.

Woodmont, 52; Lakeside, 34

Gene Larkin and M. Simon (Woodmont), 11½ points; Allan Brodie and W. Galeskie, ½

Dr. Milton Harris and Howard Nordlinger (Woodmont), 8½; Leon Nelson, jr., and Henry Gunst, 3½.

College Golf Title Play Altered By Record Entry

Des Moines, Iowa, June 18 (AP).—National Collegiate Golf Officials, faced with a record-breaking entry list for the forty-second annual meet starting here June 26, tonight doubled the championship bracket to 64 qualifying positions.

After the first two days of qualifying play, the first four rounds of match play in the tournament will be over the 18-hole distance. Qualifiers will face their first round battles Wednesday morning, June 28, with survivors playing two 18-hole matches Wednesday and two more on Thursday. Only the semifinal and final matches will be over the 36-hole route.

The battle for the Maxwell Cup Team Trophy remains unchanged. Possession of the trophy will be decided in the 36-hole qualifying round, with the school producing the low four-man team taking over the cup for one year.

Heights Nine Wins

Potomac Boat Club Eight Wins Feature From Old Dominion

Virginians, However, Capture Quad and Gig Races of Rivals' 70th Anniversary Program

By Bob Knight.

Driving with the well-harnessed strength of a college crew, the Potomac Boat Club eight swept to a comfortable victory over the Old Dominion Boat Club yesterday afternoon on the Potomac, saving the day and preventing what might have been a clean sweep of events for the young Virginia oarsmen.

The shell race featured the seventieth anniversary of the Potomac Boat Club and marked the thirty-first year of competition between the two rivals. A crowd of approximately 200 spectators saw the Alexandrians row to victory earlier in the afternoon, winning the quad and gig races.

The Potomac Boat Club crew gained an early lead when the powerful eights were swung into action. At the quarter-mark the Washington crew held a half-length advantage over the Virginians. By the time the shells reached the half-way position, the local crew had widened the gap to a length. The Alexandrians struck up a faster beat as the two boats neared the finish but fell back another quarter length under the blistering pace laid down by their competitors. The victors crossed the finish with a length and a quarter to spare, registering the time of 2 minutes and 35 seconds flat for the half-mile course.

Sandy-haired Paul Lanigan, Middle Atlantic junior singles champion and a former M. I. T. crew man, stroked flawlessly over a half-mile sprint course to defeat Vincent Gallagher for the Potomac Boat Club singles championship. Gallagher, a member of the 1920 championship Olympic crew, made a strong bid for the lead at the halfway mark when his shell was virtually abreast of Lanigan's. The Middle Atlantic champion, however, drew away as the shells neared the finish, crossing a length and a half ahead of Gallagher.

Both the gig and the quad races between the two clubs were closely fought. The two gigs flashed down the river bow to bob for almost the whole course. A judges' decision gave the race to Old Dominion with a mere foot to spare. The Virginians had things a bit easier in the quad sprint when they crossed nearly a length in front of the Potomac Club oarsmen.

In the Potomac Boat Club singles sweepstakes, spectators saw the makings of a great crew man in 16-year-old Jimmy Burch, jr. Young Burch, a Woodrow Wilson High School student, captured the event by several lengths, leaving astern Edmund Mason, a former Naval Academy oarsman. Ted Dominick, a former Yale crew man, was the victim of a capsized shell as he neared the finish. His oar "caught a crab" and flipped the fragile craft on its side.

Results were:

Free-for-all singles for members of Potomac Boat Club—Won by Burch; second, Mason; third, Poluhoff; fourth, Belt. Time, 2:30:00.

Half-mile gig race—Won by Old Dominion Boat Club (Byrd, Edmonds, Grant, Wicker and Coxswain Ross); second, Potomac Boat Club (Poluhoff, Dominick, Mason, Knox and Coxswain Baker). Time, 3:00:00.

Half-mile quad race—Won by Old Dominion Boat Club (Whitestone, Burroughs, Gensmer and Routzohn); second, Potomac Boat Club (Burch, Dominick, Mason and Lanigan). Time, 2:56:00.

Potomac Boat Club singles championship—Won by Lanigan; second, Gallagher; third, Stewart; fourth, Burch. Time, 3:26:48.

Eight-oared shell race—Won by Potomac Boat Club (Poluhoff, Birch, Stewart, Dominick, Mason, Knox, Burch, Lanigan and Coxswain Baker); second, Old Dominion Boat Club (Mankin, Weiners, Roach, Campbell, Byrd, Edmonds, Grant, Wicker and Coxswain Ross). Time, 2:35:00.

Picard Entry Runs 1-2 in French Classic

Paris, June 18 (AP).—The colors of Arthur Veil Picard were carried by Ingre and Un Mitrailleur to first and second place today in the 600,000-franc grand Steeplechase de Paris, the inaugural of the annual Grand Semaine racing season.

Third place was taken by Le Fetiche II, owned by Eugene Decrion.

Revolta-Picard Win Inverness Golf in Playoff

Wrecks Chances

Veteran Tommy Armour, who paired with long-hitting Jimmy Thomson to finish in a last-place tied with Ed Dudley and Ky Laffoon, wrecked the Nelson-McSpaden chances on the last hole, after that pair appeared to be "in."

The National Open champ and his partner needed only a half, but Armour stuck a 150-yard pitch 3 feet from the stick and knocked it in for a birdie to draw Nelson-McSpaden into the deadlock, and pull himself out of the cellar to split seventh and eighth money.

Nelson-McSpaden, plus 6, $850.

Snead-Ghezzi, plus 6, $850.

Shute-Harrison, plus 2, $850.

Hagen-Sarazen, even, $550.

Cooper-Smith, minus 9, $300 each.

Thomson-Armour, and Dudley-Laffoon, minus 9, $300 each.

286 Birdies

The field of 16 professionals tore the Inverness course apart in the 126-hole four-day event, registering 286 birdies and eight eagles. Nelson-McSpaden and Snead-Ghezzi split a $200 prize for the lowest best-ball round, each getting a nine-under-par 62, while the Shute-Harrison duo received an added $100 for getting the most birdies. The pair turned in 40 birdies and three eagles.

Snead and Ghezzi sailed smoothly into the play-off, but the others had a tough time in the final matches.

"Slammin's Sam" and his partner were even after the first five matches, but turned in a one-up victory over Smith-Cooper this morning, and then beat Dudley-Laffoon five up this afternoon for the turney's most decisive triumph.

Picard-Revolta had a plus six rating as they started today and played all-square matches with Shute-Harrison and Smith-Cooper to maintain that rating. Nelson-McSpaden, plus five at the start, were held even by Hagen-Sarazen, and then grabbed a one-up victory over Armour-Thompson.

Harrisonburg Nine Loses to Salem

Osbourn Owings, D. C. Skipper, Finishes First in Rainstorm

A Staff Correspondent.

Galesville, Md., June 18.—Osbourn Owings, of Washington, the perennial winner of the West River Sailing Club's 20-foot round-bottomed class, swept across the finish aboard the Vanity here today in a driving rain to win his class in the second race of the summer series.

The 5-year-old Vanity led the fleet virtually the entire 6-mile course. She was followed home by the Aeolus II, owned and skippered by Carlton Skinner, U. S. Maritime Commission official. Although competing in a slower class boat, the Aeolus II, a chine-bottomed craft, showed its stern to a field of three 20-foot round-bilgers. She was two minutes, or nearly a quarter mile, behind the Vanity.

It was bumpy going the entire distance for the fleet of 14 boats competing. Dot, a 16-footer piloted by Bob Hartge, of the famous boat-building family, capsized in one of the puffs. Lawrence Hartge, his brother, upheld the honor of the family by helming the Aloha to victory in the 16-foot class. Ernie Covert's Scandal, a comet, crossed in second place behind the Aloha.

Rain Postpones All National City League Ball Games

Rain caused the postponement of all games yesterday in the National City League's three sections—Class A, B and Junior—but the same schedule will be observed next Sunday.

Meanwhile, Vic Gauzza, president of the league and also the guiding spirit behind the Departmental League, announced that second-half play in the latter loop will start today with two new teams entered. D. C. Commissioners and Bureau of Engraving have dropped out, the first due to finances and the second due to a lack of outstanding players, but their places will be taken by J. C. Flood and D. G. S., strong nines of the National City group.

The Floodmen start the schedule today meeting Interior, first half winner, on the North Ellipse at 5 p. m. D. G. S. gets its first taste of action in the new league tomorrow, when it encounters Maritime Commission on the East Ellipse. According to Gauzza, it is the first time in the 39-year history of the Departmental League that a commercial team has been allowed to enter.

Fort Hoyle Bows

Baltimore, June 18 (AP).—The 110th Field Artillery polo team scored a 9-7 victory over the Sixteenth Field Artillery from Fort Hoyle today. The Pikesville team, in command all the way, led 5-1 at the half. Lieut. Walter Brooks, of the 110th topped the scoring with three goals.

Black Caddy Defeated In Jumpoff by Elzora

W. O. Welsh's Horse Wins as Rival Refuses 5½-Foot Bar; Tahra Takes Championship; Two Slightly Injured in Accidents

By Anne Hagner

Competition was hot and heavy at the Indian Spring Junior Horse Show yesterday, when the fences in the triple bar class went up to 5 feet 6 inches with a spread of 7 feet 6 inches in one of the most exciting jump-offs seen locally.

Elzora, big chestnut mare owned by W. O. Welsh and ridden by Mickey Magill, and Black Caddy, Fred Hughes' stratosphere-minded stallion, jumped off four times before Caddy decided that the fences were a little too broad and refused three times. Elzora, a consistent triple-bar horse, went over with inches to spare to take the blue as the spectators cheered wildly, their spirits revived after an afternoon of steady rain.

Championship of the show went to June Curran's gray 3-year-old Tahra, ridden alternately by her owner and Marrian Curran, jr. Tahra stayed in the ribbons throughout the day to chalk up 14 points toward the tri-color, defeating Black Caddy by one point.

Caddy, ridden by Frank (Happy) Christmas, one of the District's likeliest young riders, came in for plenty of glory by winning the class for open hunters, but later caused a mild scare when he kicked Amber Bick, who had been holding him, sharply on the elbow. It was feared that young Blick suffered a fracture, but later examination proved that it was only a bad bruise.

In the Corinthian class, one of the best-filled on the card, Dorothy Lee Counselman, mounted on Nancy Steele, had a bad spill when the gray mare ran out at the chicken coop coming into the ring and plowed through the wing of the fence, falling on the far side. Young Miss Counselman, although shaken up, was able to mount and finish the course.

The Curran family, upon whose farm the show was held, scored in every class they entered. In the horsemanship event Carroll, Marrian, jr., and June chalked up a one-two-three victory and Carroll won three places in the Corinthian class out of a possible four.

Marion Brown Risks City Title Today

Marion Brown, Manor's District women's champion, will place her city title on the line today at Columbia and the biggest field in the history of the event will attempt to see she doesn't leave the club with the crown for a second time, after Friday's final round.

Starting at 7:40 a. m., the field will leave the first tee in three-somes, with at least 15 in the field having a good chance to cop medalist's honors which should be around the 82 mark. It may take a sub-90 score to make the championship flight.

A former champion, Mrs. Betty Meckley heads the list of co-favorites with Miss Brown, while Mrs. Leo Walper, the Maryland State finalist; Mrs. Myron Davy, Congressional's threat; Mrs. Walter Stokes, Indian Spring; Mrs. Bishop Hill, Chevy Chase, and Mrs. L. G. Pray, Manor.

After today's medal round the entire field will swing into flights of 16. Players may bring caddies from other clubs.

Dear Al:

Joe (Age) Sherry, former rider and now a jockey's agent here, comes up with more funny ones than anybody on the grounds. The likeable little fellow has a language all his own. For instance, he was explaining that he loaned his auto and the next morning he got in, stepped on the starter and the battery was dead. This is how he put it: "I gets in the box, steps on the works and—no birds." The day after he got off this line, Sherry was in the pressbox to see the eighth race in which Bright Light was an entry. Bright Light had been left at the post in two previous starts. When the starting bell came, Bright Light stood flatfooted—Sherry yelled, "Look Bill—no birds!" West Virginia comes in for some ribbing on its sales tax. It's 11 cents for this and that. A Marylander told me this one. Edgar Bergen took Charlie McCarthy into a store to get a new hat. Charlie tried on a lid marked 50 cents. He decided to take it and put a 50-cent piece on the counter. The clerk looked at the half check and said, "That will be 55 cents." Charlie looked at him and asked, "What's the extra 5 cents for?" The clerk replied, "That's for tax." Charlie said, "Aw, never mind the tacks, Mister, I'm going to tie it on." Sammy Palumbo carried off the top salary of the last week for the jockeys here. The Brooklyn boy took down $324. Woodrow Kirk earned $267, Lou Machado $224 and Tony Vecceli $212. There was a $600 claim in for Hiblaze yesterday but there was a technicality and it was no go. Miss Maker and Consistent have been the only horses to win four races at the meeting. Trainer Simpson, who conditions Prince Turley, informs me that his horse is not on the stewards list, so it seems I was misinformed. Track Supt. Harry Tharpe has been doing a good job in keeping the oval in shape. The pressbox gang came home many pounds overweight Saturday after a session with "Ma" Baumgardner's Peter Pan chicken. See you on the rail.

BILL.

First race—Gay Prank ran away for some 6 furlongs when last sent postward and returned to the gate to lead all the way. Appears ready to make it two in a row. Long Pass was a winner of her last but her time was not as good as that of the top one. Pompey's Rose has good races and will improve on an off track.

Second race—Mr. Deeds has a win and a second to his credit at the meeting and seems nicely placed in this field. Counter March, an 8-year-old maiden, was second in his first start here. Ginger Hackle performed creditably last week and is dangerous.

Third race—Night Watch's two races at this abbreviated sprint route were good efforts. She seems best placed of the field. Fickle Mood is dropping down and may prove troublesome. Jimmy S. has been close during the meeting and could awake.

Fourth race — Vendor's Lien would have won in a few more jumps in that last outing. Meets cheaper company in this and I see no reason for mistakes. Fredalva makes his first appearance here and has a bit of class that will make him prominent. Wander Bird is ready for a serious effort.

Fifth race—Perhaps I'm aiming Rough Buddy a bit high in this field. The gelding failed to stop in his last and went on to win impressively. With slight improvement, he will take the chief end of the purse. Many Moons needed that last and we can expect a better race this time. Golden Mayne beat Sure Miss on an off track here last December.

Sixth race—After showing closing ability at four and a half furlongs, Cats Cradle tries a longer route. Needs only a share of the racing luck to get home on top. Miss Epe is hard-running and honest. She should be right there. Caidon for the show. Mud will move Ivonia up.

Seventh race — Justa Jimmie takes off five pounds and seems headed for a set of brackets in this field. Brooke Herod galloped last out but he picks up five pounds. Trostar for the show end.

Eighth race—Beau Bon received little help from the saddle last out and previous to that closed with a rush to win. Seems suited by the long route and with a change of riders probably will score. Sea Finn and Petee Lad are sharp and should fill out the money circle.

Best bet—Vendor's Lien.

Yale and Harvard Speakers Stress Individual Values

New Haven, Conn., June 18.—Dr. Charles Seymour, president of Yale University, in his baccalaureate address at the opening of the university's 238th commencement exercises today, declared one of the greatest responsibilities of the university-trained man today is to guard against the increase of "mass hysteria" in the world and to crusade for individualism.

"In a period of crisis, such as that we are passing through, what hope is there of a happy issue if the most delicate problems are to be decided by mass hysteria?" Dr. Seymour asked.

". . . What of our domestic, social and economic problems if their solution should be left to recriminatory high-pressure groups, winning the votes of a docile citizenry which is ready alternatively to howl with the wolves or screech with the parrots?"

To Thine Own Self be True

Cambridge, Mass., June 18.—The modern youth should not judge his role in the affairs of the world by any short-range view of contemporary life, but by his estimation of his own latent powers, Dr. James Bryant Conant, president of Harvard University, declared today in his baccalaureate address before 1,200 members and relatives of Harvard's 303d graduating class.

"Weigh the present against the future, the claims of the individual spirit against those of society," he counseled. "Civilization is the work of many hands; no one can presume to evaluate the true significance of any human life."

Steel Activity Drops a Point To 52.5%

Shrinkage of New Business Accounts For Slight Let-Down

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, Ohio, June 18.—Tapering off of new steel business has caused a let-down in operations, the magazine Steel said today. No extended upturn is expected, the magazine said, before the latter part of the next quarter. Last week's steel making rate was off 1 point to 52.5, compared with 27 per cent a year ago.

Mixed trends prevail in the finished demand. Only moderate fluctuations in output are in prospect for next several weeks, but the resumption of any extended upturn will require greater support than currently is being received from the automotive industry. This is expected the latter part of the next quarter.

The steel making rate at Pittsburgh last week was down 3 points to 40 per cent; Chicago down 3 to 49½; Youngstown up 1 to 52; Cleveland up 2½ to 55½; Birmingham rose 4 to 71; Cincinnati up 5 to 73. Unchanged, Eastern Pennsylvania, 37; Wheeling, 73; Buffalo, 44; New England, 40, and Detroit, 57.

Scrap prices generally are firm. The composite holds at $14.62. Composite of finished steel prices is unchanged at $55.70.

Home Loan Issue Of $41,500,000 To Be Paid Off

The $41,500,000 issue of series "E" —1 per cent consolidated Federal Home Loan Bank debentures which mature July 1, 1939, will be paid off and no new issue will be offered at this time, John H. Fahey, chairman of the Federal Home Loan Bank board, announced yesterday.

Due to the strong cash position of the Federal Home Loan Banks and to the decreased demand for advances by the member institutions during the past few months, the board decided it would be unnecessary to refinance any portin of the maturing issue.

At the time the maturing issue was offered in June, 1938, the Federal Home Loan Banks had advances outstanding of nearly $188,000,000. These outstanding advances increased until on December 31, 1938, they had reached $199,000,000. Since the first of the year, however, repayments of advances have exceeded advances made so that on May 31, 1939, the amount outstanding had dropped to less than $158,000,000, a decline since the issue was offered of about $30,000,000 and since the first of the year of approximately $41,000,000.

Since the maturing issue of consolidated Federal Home Loan Bank debentures was offered in June, 1938, the cash position of the banks has increased from $41,120,000 to $84,240,000 on May 31, 1939.

THE BALTIMORE AND OHIO RAILROAD COMPANY
SUMMARY OI ANNUAL REPORT FOR THE YEAR 1938

Report of the Company's operations for the year 1938 is being mailed to the stockholders. Stated briefly, the results for the year show a decrease of 20.49% in gross revenues, or from $169,436,436 in 1937 to $134,722,330 in 1938, and an increase in the net loss, after all taxes and other deductions, from $720,695 to $13,124,530.

Total operating expenses of $104,984,021 showed a reduction of $23,875,495, or 18.53%, compared with the year 1937. The expenses reflect an increase in wage rates which took effect in the latter half of 1937 and added about $4,150,000 to the company's expenses in 1938.

Railway tax accruals, at $10,412,774, reflected a decrease of $505,781. Tax accruals include $3,709,108 pay-roll taxes covering unemployment compensation under the Social Security Act and the Carriers' Taxing Act of 1937 for the purposes of the Railroad Retirement Act.

BALANCE SHEET

The balance sheet at December 31, 1938, shows total investments (less accrued depreciation) of $1,078,104,478 and current assets of $23,818,931. The total of interest bearing debt and leased lines obligations outstanding was $683,808,070. Current liabilities amounted to $26,855,503. The capital stock outstanding was $315,158,485 and corporate surplus $60,337,728.

The report presents a condensed statement of the Plan for Modification of Interest Charges and Maturities, and points out that of the total of $542,810,628 of securities affected by the Plan, voluntary assents have been received on $489,481,178, or 86.49 per cent., from more than 57,000 holders.

Business Has Turned Upward, Babson Says After Tour

Summer Activity Should Be Greater, Without Any Evidence of a Boom, He Says
Construction Is Backbone of the Upturn

By Roger W. Babson

Wilmington, Del., June 18.—During the past two weeks I have traveled about 4,000 miles. It is very evident from my observations that business has started a new upward climb. It is a peculiar coincidence, but it was just a year ago this week that business threw off the shackles of the 1938 recession. Trade reports of the past fortnight indicate that many industries have rounded the turn and are now straightening out on the recovery trail. Summer business should be better than at the current time, although I see no evidence of a "boom."

For June the Babsonchart index of business stands at 96. A year ago it was down to 80. This means business is 20 per cent above the low point of last year. In my Business Outlook for 1939 I predicted that business would show a 25 per cent gain for the first half of 1939 over the same period of 1938. I was a trifle too optimistic. For the entire six months the gain has averaged only 20 per cent. I had expected that by June business would show a slight improvement over the level of early January. Actually, it has tapered off since the New Year and is now 4 per cent below the January level.

Retail Trade Brisk.

However, instead of being a pessimistic influence on the second half outlook, I think that is an optimistic indicator. During the past six months the excess inventories of goods built up as a result of the very sharp upswing in business last fall have largely been used up. Retail trade in most areas this year has been very steady. The sale of goods has been running ahead of the production of goods. Retail trade this month, for instance, is particularly brisk, the gain over a year ago running from 5 to 10 per cent.

We are entering the second half of the year, therefore, with retail trade satisfactory in most parts of the country and with inventories low. Figures from pivotal industries indicate that business will be better in the weeks to come. The steel industry, for instance, has taken a sensational upturn in the past month. Operations are now at 55 per cent of capacity against only 45 per cent a month ago.

Most Industries Picking Up

Other industries, while not moving ahead so spectacularly as steel, have turned up in the last few weeks. The number of freight cars moving over the country's railroads are practically at the best figure for 1939. Electric power consumption is rising after a two months' dip. Automobile assemblies have been disappointing so far, but new model production is scheduled to get under way in July—a full month earlier than a year ago. Lumber operations are almost 50 per cent ahead of 1938 at this time, reflecting the encouraging gain in home building.

In fact, construction has been the backbone of the 1938-39 business improvement. Activity is 40 per cent above a year ago and well above June, 1937, when general business was running close to its ten-year peak. There is a tremendous trek of population from city to suburbs and to country towns. Remodeling and new building in some suburbs is almost of boom proportions. Commercial and industrial building, however, is very quiet with the exception of Government-sponsored projects.

Business Best in North

At the present time business is best in the Northern and Northeastern States. My map, which shows business conditions in every city and every State at all times, has changed in recent months. I find that of 23 "gold," or good, States this month, all but four are east of the Mississippi and north of the Ohio rivers or on the Pacific Coast. Certain farm areas in the Southeast, South and Southwest, where business was booming a few months ago, are now experiencing quite a slowing down.

I do not look for this situation to continue, however, because farm prices are now improving. Quotations today are equal to, or slightly higher than, a year ago. Crops are not expected to be quite so large this year. With the Government's efforts to eliminate surpluses, plus the $1,300,000,000 benefit program, farm income in the next few months should top the 1938 level by 10 per cent, barring any unforseen weather developments. So farmers can be added to the city workers as potentially better retail buyers this summer.

Dollars Must Go to Work

The huge wads of cash choking the treasuries of banks and insurance companies is another factor which keeps me bullish. There is more money available for investment today than ever before in the history of this country. The credit expansion potentialities stagger the imagination. America's problem, of course, is to put this money to work. It is just as necessary to get these dollars employed as it is to get our 10,000,000 jobless back to work. We cannot accomplish one task without accomplishing the other.

These dollars will not go into use until confidence is restored. Confidence must be built on honesty, industry and thrift. Only "righteousness exalteth a nation." Business should be better this fall than it was this pring. Morevore, it should also be better than in the fall of 1938. However, I foresee no real prosperity until there is a change in the goals and principles of the American people.

Babson Picks Straws In Business Wind

2. Most industries feel upturn.
3. Building best in ten years.
4. Stocks of goods on hand low.
5. Retail trade at good level.
6. Sensitive commodity prices rising.
7. Farm income higher than in 1938.
8. European picture quieter.

B. & O. Reports $13,124,530 Deficit for Year

Special Dispatch to The Post

Baltimore, June 18.—In the 112th annual report of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad's operations for 1938 now being mailed to the stockholders, the results for the year show a decrease of 20.49 per cent in gross revenues, or from $169,436,436 in 1937 to $134,722,330 in 1938, and an increase in the net loss, after all taxes and other deductions, from $720,695 to $13,124,530.

Total operating expenses of $104,-984,021 showed a reduction of $23,-875,495, or 18.53 per cent, compared with 1937. The expenses reflect an increase in wage rates which took effect in the latter half of 1937 and added about $4,150,000 to the company's expenses in 1938.

Railway tax accruals, at $10,412,-774, reflected a decrease of $505,781. Tax accruals include $3,709,108 pay roll taxes covering unemployment compensation under the social security act and the carriers' taxing act of 1937 for the purposes of the railroad retirement act.

The balance sheet at December 31, 1938, shows total investments (less accrued depreciation), of $1,078,104,-478 and current assets of $23,818,931. The total of interest bearing debt and leased lines obligations outstanding was $683,808,070. Current liabilities amounted to $26,855,503. The capital stock outstanding was $315,158,485 and corporate surplus $60,337,728.

1,314 Closed Banks Now Liquidated

During May the liquidation of 12 receiverships was completed and the affairs thereof finally closed. This makes a total of 1,314 receiverships finally closed or restored to solvency since the banking holiday of March, 1933.

Total disbursements, including offsets allowed, to depositors and other creditors of these 1,314 receiverships, exclusive of the 42 restored to solvency, aggregated $568,788,147, or an average return of 80.90 per cent of total liabilities, while unsecured creditors received dividends amounting to an average of 68.24 per cent of their claims.

World Commodity Index

Rukeyser Says: 2-Price Plan Might Solve Cotton Ills

By Merryle Stanley Rukeyser,
International News Economic Commentator

New York, June 18.—The cotton textile trade appears to be in arms over Secretary Wallace's advocacy in his Little Rock, Ark., speech of something akin to an export subsidy for cotton. There is mild irony in this situation, because Mr. Wallace, in his effort to find a solution of the farm problem, has gone all the way round the circle of remedies.

It is difficult to reconcile his current proposals with his earlier internationalism. Apparently the Secretary's earlier theories were tripped up when they ran into realities.

As a spokesman for the cotton textile industry, a former member of this Administration, Dr. Claudius T. Murchison, now president of the Cotton Textile Institute, makes a plea for free prices. It seems to me that there is a middle ground between these two seemingly irreconcilable positions.

Share for Exporters

Under a two-price system, a price should be set for that portion of the cotton crop to be produced at home which would be in relation to prevailing American industrial wage rates and protect American prices. Then instead of dumping the surplus overseas at bargain prices and thus subsidizing foreign textile manufacturers, it could readily be arranged to allocate the bargain export cotton to American manufacturers engaged in the export trade.

Thus, by one stroke, not only would a farm problem be dealt with, but there would be in the transaction the means of giving industrial employment in American factories engaged in the export trade.

This should be more sensible than an export subsidy for cotton, which would give British, Japanese and other foreign cotton textile manufacturers a competitive advantage over American sellers in neutral overseas markets.

The time has come to get down to brass tacks. For more than six years there has been theoretical talk, vast regimentation of the farmer, and a tremendous strain on the public Treasury. But no real progress has been made in fulfilling the 1932 campaign promise of bringing agriculture into balanced relationship with industry, so that there can be equality of exchange.

Equilibrium

Usually sound diagnosis founders on mid-Victorian economic theory. Doctrinaires oppose anything "artificial" on the agricultural side, overlooking that classic laissez faire no longer prevails on the industrial side of the equation. Balance is not restored because the industrial price level is shot through with artificialities, including tariff, cost-raising social legislation, and union activity which adds to price rigidity on the industry side.

Thus, a normal equilibrium through deflation of industrial costs and prices has been artificially prevented. A Nation cannot prosper in disequilibrium. The sensible and statesmanlike way out is to restore agricultural income. This involves first of all a willingness to subordinate foreign trade to the basic needs of the home economy. This means stoppage of imports except in time of drought of competitive farm products. Secondly, it involves a program for producing at home agricultural products now largely imported, including sugar and wood pulp. Thirdly, it entails a long-term program for finding new industrial uses for farm products through chemical research. And fourthly, as an immediate stoppage remedy, a two-price system is indicated.

The cost of bolstering farm income should be levied on the users of farm products, not on the Federal Treasury.

N. Y. Bank Stocks Drop 3.41% in Week

New York, June 18.—New York City bank stocks suffered a sharp setback during the past week, according to records compiled by Hoit, Rose & Troster, specialists in bank and insurance stocks. The aggregate market value of 16 leading issues on June 16 was $1,448,-468,000 compared with $1,499,651,-000 at the close of the previous week, a decrease of $51,183,000, or 3.41 per cent.

Insurance stocks in the New York City market eased off slightly during the past week. The aggregate market value of 20 leading fire and casualty insurance issues on June 16 was $596,385,000 compared with $602,205,000 at the close of the previous week, a decrease of $5,820,-000, or 0.96 per cent.

Report Claims NLRB Saved 12 Times Its Cost

Saving of $33,000,000 In 1938 Compared To $2,700,000 Outlay

The National Labor Relations Board last night answered with figures charges by its critics that the board's operation has been a heavy financial burden on the American public.

Through its chief economist, David J. Saposs, the board claimed a statistical analysis indicated the effective operation of the board had saved, conservatively, over $33,000,000 to the Nation, as compared with a cost of $2,700,000 last year.

"The operation of the labor act thus cost less than one-twelfth of the estimated savings resulting therefrom, and amounted to but 2 cents per person in the United States," the board announced.

Its study of savings, the board explained, was made by comparing the trend of strikes in industries over which the board has taken jurisdiction with the trend of other industries.

"From these data it was possible to estimate the strikes averted by board operation, and their possible cost to workers, employers and the general public," the board's statement claimed.

In 1938 there were 11,488 cases before the NLRB, involving 2,820,000 workers. The appropriation for the calendar year was $2,700,000.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

A hand that would cause the chairrockers to pause and reflect before playing is relayed to us through Frank B. Lord, bridge writer and expert of Washington. It is shown in today's box. North and South reach an ambitious contract of seven diamonds through the use of ace-showing bids, four hearts and six spades, and South is faced with the problem of winning 13 tricks with a losing heart in his hand. Can you see how he did it?

Today's Hand

6 ◇	Pass	6 ♠	Pass
7 ◇	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead—♡ K.

Plan your own play before reading how Frank B. Lord's "Mr. Jack" made it.

"Mr. Jack" wins his 13 tricks by reversing the dummy and creating a long trump in the North hand on which to discard his heart loser. As marvelous as this play is, it is rather simple to perform once it is seen.

West opens the king of hearts, declarer wins with the ace, and leads a club, ruffing in his hand. He plays the diamond five to dummy's ten, and ruffs the club king on the return. He cashes the ace of diamonds. At this point, he holds one trump in his hand, the queen, and two in the dummy. He leads the diamond queen, overtakes with North's king, and plays the diamond jack, drawing East's last trump, and discarding the troublesome heart three. The rest of his hand is composed of spades which are all good.

Most players bid the hand to six spades which was made easily, declarer simply conceding a heart. But seven spades cannot be made, as no such dummy reversal procedure as was engineered at seven diamonds is possible.

In order to develop a trump trick in this fashion, it is necessary for declarer to ruff himself down, to one less than the number of trumps in dummy. If it were possible for South to ruff with four of his spades, he could also develop a trick, but no such ruffing opportunity is present.

The Federal Diary

By The Diarist

Just before the Agriculture Department directory of employe activities went to press, the publishers discovered what they chose to call "an additional resurgence of interest" among Henry Wallace's hired hands which seemed to call for the organization of:

A swimming club, a book club, a consumers club, an organization on co-operative housing "to combat the acute local conditions"—and "many others."

Right now all one of the hands has to look forward to in the way of organized extracurricular divertisement on a hot day, according to the directory, is:

The Civil Service Commission has announced open examinations as follows:

Aircraft propeller mechanic ($1,800 a year), junior aircraft propeller mechanic $1,680), apply before June 23, secretary, Board of United States Civil Service Examiners, Wright Field, Dayton, Ohio.

Metalsmith, aviation $7.96 to $8.92 a day with 40-hour week), application must be on file not later than July 6 with manager, Fourth United States Civil Service District, 916 G street northwest, Washington, for station, Naval Operating Base, Norfolk, Va.

A general eight-hour day for Veterans Administration field employes which officials are considering, could not be made fully effective 30 to 60 days after starting date. It would take that long to select additional employes from the Civil Service register, as the A. F. G. E. news service points out.

Speaking once more of Henry Wallace's hired hands, his Bureau of Agricultural Economics has reported a gain of more than a million farm workers in May. Total number of farm hands now, 12,372,000.

Washington is a city of magnificent distances, statues and, in the summer time, of band concerts. Bob Burns Says—

It always pays to have a poker-face or mysterious look in business. Sometimes I kinda wish I was a beautiful woman so's I could appear to be very deep and mysterious while I'm really just kinda half-dozin' with my eyes open.

Once when I was stopping at Uncle Flint's Commercial House Hotel, he said, "Robin, you see that crooked purple line around the top of this hotel? A lot'ta guests have stayed here three or four days longer than they planned to, just tryin' to figger out how come that line is up there. I've had scientists and authors studyin' that stripe and askin' me fool questions for weeks at a time. And all the time I was collectin' their board and room rent."

I said, "Well, how come you put it up there in the first place?"

He said, "Once a salesman gave me a sample can of paint—and I didn't know what else to do with it."

A. B. C. Convention Opens Here Today

Between 400 and 500 delegates will open the American Business Clubs' national convention at the Mayflower Hotel at 9:30 a. m. today. A three-day schedule of business and social events is planned.

The morning session today will be followed by a tour of the Federal Bureau of Investigation this afternoon and a Potomac River cruise tonight. At a luncheon tomorrow Solicitor General Robert H. Jackson will be the chief speaker. The sessions will close Wednesday at a dinner meeting at which Judge Edward F. Curran will deliver the principal address. There will be dancing.

Relief Congress To Meet Here

Representatives of 200,000 unemployed and WPA workers, revolting against "bureaucratic control" of the Workers' Alliance, will hold a "Right-to-Earn-a-Living" Conference here in Pythian Temple, from Saturday through next Monday. The group is on record for a $3,500,000,000 relief appropriation.

"We plan to explore the possibility of setting up a national organization of unemployed and WPA workers which has its base in the rank and file and is strictly democratic in its methods," said L. L. Leith, of Baltimore, arrangements chairman.

"The Government has poured millions upon millions into the private corporations which are not absorbing the unemployed."

PULITZER PRIZE NOVEL

THE YEARLING

By Marjorie Kinnan Rawlings

CHAPTER XIII.

NEXT TO HAVING the albino 'coon alive, nothing could be finer that a knapsack of the soft curious fur. Jody's mind was full of it. He could not eat his breakfast. He wanted to show his gratitude.

"I kin clean the water troughs, Pa," he said.

Penny nodded.

"I keep hopin' each year, come spring, to hire us a deep well dug. Then them water troughs could fill with trash and welcome. But bricks is mighty high."

"I'd not know what 'twas, not to be sparin' o' my water," Ma Baxter said. "For 20 years, I been sparin'."

"Now be patient, Ma," Penny said.

His face furrowed, Jody knew that the lack of abundant water was a trial to his father, and a greater hardship than for mother or son. Jody was held accountable for wood, but it was Penny himself who slung the ox yoke across his narrow shoulders, hung the great hewn cypress buckets at either end, and trudged up and down the sandy road from the clearing to the sink-hole, where seepage alone built pools of water, amber-colored from lead-mold, and filtered by the sand. It was as though the labor were Penny's apology to his family for having established them on land so arid, when creeks and rivers and good wells flowed not many miles away. For the first time, Jody wondered why his father had chosen to inhabit this place. Thinking of the pools on the steep side of the sink-hole that must be cleared, he was almost tempted to wish that they lived on the river, with Grandma Hutto. Yet the clearing, the island of tall pines, made up the world. Life in other places was only a tale that was told, as Oliver Hutto told of Africa and China and Connecticut.

His mother said, "You better put a biscuit-two and some meat in your pocket. You ain't et."

"You know what I wisht I had, Ma? A pouch like a 'possum, to tote things."

"The Lord put your stomach inside o' purpose. He meant you to put your rations inside you when your Ma sets 'em on the table."

He rose and ambled to the door.

Penny said, "You git on to the sink-hole, son, and I'll foller time I've skinned out your 'coon hide."

THE DAY WAS BRIGHT and windy. Jody took a grubbing hoe from the shed behind the house and strolled toward the road. The mulberry trees by the fence were a sharp green. His mother's favorite hen clucked to her biddies from the slat coop. He scooped up a small ball of yellow down and held it against his cheek, its cheepings shrill in his ear. He released it and it scurried for shelter under the fat hen's wing. The yard would soon need hoeing.

The walk from the front steps to the gate needed hoeing, too. The walk was bordered with cypress slats, but the weeds crept under and over, and grew impudently among the amaryllis that lined the pathway. The lavender petals of the chinaberry blooms were falling. Jody scuffed his bare toes through them and went through the gate. He hesitated. The barns were tempting. There might be a new hatching of biddies. The calf might have a different look from yesterday. And if he could think of a good reason to give himself for prowling about, the increasingly unwelcome job of cleaning the water troughs might be that much longer postponed. Then it occurred to him that if he finished the cleaning in short order he might be through for the day. He swung the grubbing hoe over his shoulder and set off at a trot toward the sink-hole.

The end of the world, he thought, might be like the sink-hole. Fodder-wing had said that it was empty and dark, with only clouds to ride on. But no one knew. Certainly reaching it must feel as it felt to reach the edge of the sink-hole. Jody wished that he had been the first to discover it. He turned the corner of the fence row. He left the road and took the trail. It was narrow, hemmed in by briers. He pretended that he did not know there was a sink-hole. He passed a dogwood tree. It was a landmark. He closed his eyes and whistled carelessly. He put his feet ahead of him slowly. In spite of his determination, in spite of squeezing his eyelids tight, he could not make himself go farther with is eyes shut. He opened them and walked with a sense of relief the last few steps to the edge of the great limestone sink.

A SMALL WORLD lay at his feet. It was deep and concave, like a great bowl. Fodder-wing said that a bear as big as God had scooped out a pawful of earth to get a lily-root. Jody knew the truth from his father. It was only that underground rivers ran through the earth and swirled an eddied beneath the surface, and changed their courses. This was especially so where there were streaks of limestone, as here. The limestone was soft and crumbling before the air touched and hardened it. Sometimes, without reason, without warning, after long rains, perhaps, a section of earth sank in, gently and almost without sound, and a deep cavity marked the place where once had run, darkly and unseen, a river. Sometimes the sink-hole was a few feet only in depth and width. Baxter's sink-hole was 60 feet deep. It was so wide that Penny's old muzzle-loader could not hit a squirrel from one side to the other. The sink-hole was as round as though it had been dug on purpose. Staring into it, it seemed to Jody that the truth of its fashioning was more fantastic than the tales of Fodder-wing.

The hole was older than Penny Baxter. Penny said he could remember when the trees that lined its steep banks were no larger much than saplings. Now they were of great size. A magnolia that grew half-way up the east bank had a trunk as broad as the mill-stone with which the Baxters ground their meal. A hickory was as thick as a man's thigh. A live oak spread its branches across half the sink-hole. Smaller trees, sweet gum and dogwood, ironwood and holly, grew lushly up and down the banks. Palmettos thrust tall spears among them. Giant ferns grew from top to bottom. Jody looked down into a great cupped garden, feathered with green leaves, cool and moist and, always, mysterious. The sink-hole was set in the arid scrub, at the core of the pine island, like a lush green heart.

The trail to the bottom of the sink-hole led down the west bank. It was worn deep into the sand and limestone by the years of Penny Baxter's feet, leading his stock to water. In the dryest weather, there was a continual seepage which dripped down the banks and came to gather at the bottom in a shallow pool. This water was stagnant, and clouded by the comings and goings of the animals who watered there. Only Penny's hogs used it for drinking and wallowing. For the other stock, and for his own family's use, Penny had an ingenious arrangement. Up the east, or opposite, bank from the trail, he had cut out of the limestone strata a series of troughs to catch and hold the filtered seepage. The lowest trough was shoulder-high from the bottom of the sink-hole. Here he led the cow and calf to water, and his horse. Here in his young manhood he had led the yoke of cream-colored oxen with which he had cleared his land. A few yards higher up, he had cut a pair of deeper troughs. Here his wife brought her block and paddle and came to do her washing. A portion of the bank bore a milky white-wash from the years of her soapsuds. For her annual quilt-washing, she caught rain water.

AT THE LAST, high above the stock trough and the wash troughs, lay a deep, narrow trough that gathered water used only for cooking and drinking. The bank above was so steep that none of the larger animals disturbed the water. The deer that came, the bears, the panthers, all used the west trail and watered either at the pool itself, or at the stock trough. Squirrels drank from the upper trough, and occasionally a wildcat, but for the most it was untouched by anything but Penny's gourd, dipping into it to fill his cypress buckets.

Jody jolted down the trail, bracing himself against the steepness with the grubbing hoe. It made a clumsy stock, catching in the wild grape vines. The descent always excited him. Step by step the banks lifted above him. Step by step he passed the tops of trees. A breath of wind eddied into the green bowl, stirring waves of coolness. The leaves fluttered their thin hands. The ferns bent a moment to the ground. A red-bird swung in an arc across the sink-hole. It turned and dropped down to the pool, like a bright leaf falling. Seeing the boy, it whirred up and away. Jody knelt by the pool.

Spencer to Stay Here To Flout Roosevelt

Daytona Beach, Fla., June 18 (U.P.). Howland Spencer, whose yacht was searched by customs agents Friday, tonight denied he was applying for British citizenship, because "I wouldn't lose a chance to vote against Franklin Roosevelt."

Spencer, who two years ago disputed President Roosevelt's right to use the name "Krum Elbow" for his Hyde Park, N. Y., estate, was quoted by Coast Guardsmen last night as saying he was applying for British citizenship.

Woman Who Saw Foundry Church Dedicated 73 Years Ago Watches Plaque Unveiled at Site

Seventy-three years ago, just after the Civil War, 11-year-old Sallie Childs came to the corner of Fourteenth and G streets northwest to view the dedication of the Foundry Methodist Church.

Gray-haired and 84, she returned to the spot yesterday—a site now occupied by the Colorado Building—to watch Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes unveil a commemorative plaque in the presence of scores of Foundry parishioners, led by Dr. Frederick Brown Harris. The present Foundry Church is on Sixteenth street, between P and Q streets northwest.

"We are met today to dedicate a marker for one of the most historic sites in American church history," said the prelate, who later recalled that he had been born the same year of the dedication—1866.

"Here that hardy pioneer, Bishop Francis Asbury, helped select the location for Foundry Methodist Church in 1815—which served for nearly 90 years as a spiritual beacon in the Nation's Capital," he said.

Describing the establishment of the original church by Henry Foxall, owner of a munitions and cannon foundry in Georgetown, Dr. Harris said that the latter vowed to build a church if the British did not destroy his plant when they invaded Washington.

The program was held in connection with the Baltimore Conference of the Methodist Church in session at Douglas Memorial Methodist Church, where Bishop Hughes ordained the following to offices:

Elders: Robert Louis Bartlett, Mount Airy, Md.; Edward Harry Porter, Ellerslie, Md.; James Arthur Richards, Oldtown, Md., and Joseph Tucker Riley, Riviera Beach, Md. They were authorized to preach and give communion.

Deacons: Walter DeWitt Dickey, Smithsburg, Md.; James Melvin Griffin, Hindman, Pa.; Karl Bennett Justus, Sikesville, Md., and Lewis Frank Ransom, Lonaconing, Md. They are authorized to preach.

Deaconesses: Miss M. Marie Jones, Baltimore; Miss Helen P. Newman, Washington, and Dorothy J. Troutman, Baltimore.

Assisting in the ordinations were Dr. G. Ellis Williams, superintendent of the Washington district; the Rev. Robert Wood, superintendent of the West Baltimore district; the Rev. S. R. Bailey, superintendent of the East Baltimore district, and the Rev. Harry Evaul, superintendent of the Frederick district. The conference closes this morning with announcements of pastoral appointments.

SINCLAIR

HAVE WE STARTED SOMETHING?

A week ago Sinclair announced an increase of ½¢ a gallon in its tank-wagon prices for gasoline.

We were not and are not trying to run any business but our own. The response to our announcement has gone far beyond that. For example:

A Mid-Western Banker Writes:

"If there were others, not only in your own line but also in other fields, that had the firm conviction and the willingness to proclaim and defend it, I think we could forget all about national legislation."

A Financial Writer Says:

"The position Sinclair has taken is courageous and aggressive and certainly a sound step . . . Your advertisement should cause others to do less 'crying' and more thinking in an effort to find a constructive approach to recovery."

A Labor Leader Says:

"The main criticism I have to make of American industrialists is that they do not seem to know how to make money."

A Publisher Telegraphs:

"May I extend our congratulations to Sinclair on its courage and leadership in the sound policy expressed in its advertisements concerning the price increase. This policy followed through would put the oil industry again in the profit column."

An Oil Trade Journal Says:

"It might well be added that no industry can afford to continue on price margins that are unprofitable . . . What additional money the oil industry may collect for its products will be used in the same way that the money heretofore collected has been used, right here in the U. S. for the continued payment of good wages to a million or more Americans who work fair hours; for the purchase of supplies and equipment from a large part of this country's manufacturers, and, if possible, for the payment of a little money to the stockholders who have put up their money for this $15.000,000,000 industry."

A Great Steel Master Declares:

"No manufacturer can continue to operate at a loss and continue to maintain high wages and increased operating expenses . . . Not until they remember they are in business to make a profit will their statements be written in black instead of red."

I do not believe that 130,000,000 Americans want depressed or profitless industries. The people, I think, want more jobs, good wages, more purchasing power and general prosperity. They are willing to pay reasonable prices to make these things possible by up-building American industry in the American way.
